Government Charges Fraud in Milwaukee Strike Vote

LABOR STRIFE AROUSES CONGRESS

Knox and Knudsen Assert Less Than a Majority in Favor of Walkout of 7,800

Allis Chalmers Company Announces It Will Comply with Request To Reopen Big Plant

(By The Associated Press)
Challenged by the CIO to state their authority for calling on the strike-bound Allis-Chalmers plant at Milwaukee to resume vital defense operations, Secretary Knox and William S. Knudsen replied last night that the strike vote was obtained by "fraudulent means" and that to continue the work stoppage would be "entirely unreasonable."

At the same time, they said their request had been an "appeal to the patriotism and loyalty of men and management, not an ultimatum."

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, had demanded to know under "what powers" the navy secretary and director of the office of production management had issued their "ultimatum." Knudsen and Knox replied in a telegram.

2,200 Fraudulent Votes
In speaking of the strike vote, they evidently referred to a finding by the Wisconsin employment relations board that union officials had caused at least 2,200 ballots to be marked for a strike in a Jan. 21 vote, and that in actuality less than a majority of employees voted to strike.

The board ordered an election within fifteen days to determine whether the employees wanted to continue on strike.

Before Murray's exchange with Knudsen and Knox, the Allis-Chalmers management had announced it would comply with the request from the defense chiefs and hoped to resume full operations today or Saturday. It telegraphed its 7,800 production employees asking them to return to work.

Charles Workman Held for Murder

NEWARK, N. J., March 27 (AP)—The Essex county grand jury today indicted Charles (The Bug) Workman, held at Brooklyn, N. Y., in the investigation of Murder, Inc., for the murder of Arthur (Dutch) Schultz, Flegenheimer, prohibition era beer baron, in a Newark tavern on October 23, 1935.

Prosecutor William A. Wachenfeld said he would move immediately to extradite Workman from Brooklyn, where he has been held under $75,000 bail for a year as a material witness in the Murder, Inc., investigation.

He added he hoped to bring Workman to trial as soon as possible.

The indictment charged that Workman to trial as soon as possible with malice aforethought, murdered the beer baron.

Three of Schultz's companions, Abe Franke, Otto Berman and Bernard (Lulu) Rosenkrantz were also wounded fatally as they sat in the tavern drinking beer by killers who stormed into the tavern and pumped bullets into them.

$1,336,000,000 Voted for Relief Of Farmers Sets All-Time Record

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—The Senate "farm bloc" showed its power today when a record-breaking measure carrying more than $1,336,000,000 for agriculture emerged from an appropriations subcommittee.

Senator Russell (D-Ga.), chairman of the group, said scores of increases over amounts previously voted by the House were "approved unanimously."

"This is the largest farm bill we've had but it's only common justice," Russell told reporters. "Farmers are not benefiting from the defense program and every other

Churchill Pledges British Will Help Yugoslavs in War

Prime Minister Greatly Pleased over Latest Turn in Events

LONDON, March 27 (AP)—Winston Churchill pledged all of Britain's might today to "make common cause" with the new Yugoslav government—if that government be prepared to fight the Axis—and other informed sources at once pictured this help as a naval-military-aerial movement to harry the whole German right flank in the Balkans.

This, they said, could be accomplished by British battle fleet sweeps in the Adriatic; by the transfer of Imperial troops through Salonika, Greece, into Yugoslavia; and by the action of British warplanes already based in Greece.

The German left flank rests now on the Black Sea in both Rumania and Bulgaria; the right flank at the moment along the Yugoslavian frontier; the whole pointed down toward the Aegean.

Rep. Sumners in Favor of Death For Enemies of Defense Program

Texas Congressman Says U. S. Faces Fate of France; Others Score Labor Leaders and FDR

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—An outpouring of protests in both Senate and House against strikes in defense industries was climaxed today by a declaration from Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) that the House Judiciary committee would, if necessary, propose the electric chair for "enemies of this nation whether in factories or elsewhere."

In an hour-long address, Sumners told a hushed House that America's danger was no less than that of France before the German invasion. "We are moving rapidly toward actual belligerent action," he said. "We are going to meet the supreme test before long."

At another point he asserted that "America is weak inside or else defense strikes would not be occurring."

Cox Would Draft Labor

Earlier, Rep. Cox (D-Ga.) had proposed that President Roosevelt be given authority to draft labor for defense industries. It was "shameful," he said, that there should be strikes in factories vitally needed for armament production and Mr. Roosevelt should not only have the power to draft labor, but should exercise it.

Across the capitol, meantime, Senator Byrd (D-Va.) told the Senate it was time for Congress "to act with promptness and courage to meet this menace that has arisen to our security and welfare."

He proposed to vest the National Mediation Board with authority to enforce its decisions because, he said, public opinion had been "impotent to force those who are responsible for the strikes to abandon their purpose and work for the common good of our republic." That applied, he said, both to industry and labor.

Wiley Blames Roosevelt

Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) put in that the administration had been guilty of "internal and infernal appeasing" was "paying 200 to 300 per cent to the racketeers in industry" and was "permitting the defense program to be slowed down by appeasing the racketeers in labor."

In a statement, Senator Bailey (D-NC) said he would support "whatever measures may be necessary to eliminate all possibility of strikes or sit-downs against the security of the people of the United States."

Third Draft Call For April Issued By Third Corps

Will Bring Out 5,000 More Men, 1,575 from Maryland

BALTIMORE, March 27 (AP)—A third selective service call for 5,000 men to report during the last ten days of April today sent the Third Corps area's quota for the month to 16,650.

The highest monthly total requisitioned to date from the District of Columbia and the three states comprising the area reflected a spring-time pickup in the training activities of Uncle Sam's citizen army.

The April totals, completed today with announcement of quotas for the third period, are as follows: Pennsylvania: First call, 4,158; second call, 1,450; third call, 2,880; total, 8,488.

Maryland: First call, 945; second call, 1,120; third call, 1,575; total, 3,640.

Germany Rushes Forces To Yugoslavia Frontier

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 28 (Friday) (AP)—German occupation forces in Bulgaria were rushing today toward the Yugoslav frontier, apparently as the result of the ouster there of the "Axis" Government of Regent Prince Paul.

An informed source in this capital said Nazi southward movement of troops, under way since the occupation of Bulgaria, had been reversed suddenly and a rush of Nazi reinforcements was sent in the direction of defiant Yugoslavia.

"The movement of the past several weeks in men and materials has been completely reversed," the source said.

The general view here was that the Yugoslav coup which ousted the Axis pact signers and installed a pro-British and pro-Greek government would sooner or later precipitate a general Balkan war.

Some German troops in Southern Bulgaria were immediately shifted over toward the Yugoslav frontier near where it meets the Greek line.

82 Arrested in Raid on Headquarters of C. I. O.

RICHMOND, Ind., March 27 (AP)—State police seized eighty-two leaders and supporters of the CIO farm Equipment Workers' Organizing committee today after a twenty-minute, club-swinging skirmish between city police and pickets at the gates of the International Harvester Company's Richmond plant.

The clash occurred as the company reopened the plant—closed by a strike since February 17—in the face of a defy by a union leader that the strike would be continued even "if it means the spilling of blood in the gutters."

Many heads were struck in the wild melee, which ended with city police arresting several pickets, but only two persons—policeman, Louis Daniels and Milford Roberts, a picket—were injured severely.

Hitler Demands Explanation of Yugoslav Revolt

Berlin Expects New Government To Reply to Request at Once

BERLIN, March 27 (AP)—Adolf Hitler's government demanded tonight that Yugoslavia explain how the upheaval of her leadership will affect the tri-partite pact which the Balkan kingdom joined just two days ago.

Spokesmen said the communication amounted to an "urgent request," and they expressed hope that a reply might be received before morning.

Persons in the know explained that to the Reich there were two facets to the Yugoslav situation, involving as it does the disappearance of the government which signed the nation to the Axis pact on Tuesday at Vienna.

Domestic Issue First

The first is the domestic issue and if the affair in Belgrade is purely this, Germany isn't interested, Germans said they had knowledge of certain plans by Regent Prince Paul and Premier Dr. Drazisa Cvetkovic for keeping the boy King Peter out of the actual government, even upon his scheduled accession this autumn. If this plan was crossed, it's no concern of Germany's, it was said.

However it was stressed that Germany will insist on liberation of Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic, now reported under arrest. This is because these men are considered prime exponents of pro-Axis policy.

Germany, however, is vitally concerned as to the foreign angle of Yugoslavia's turmoil.

Informed sources said the Reich must know in the shortest time possible whether the course pursued by Cvetkovic and Cincar-Markovic will be continued.

Two Friends of Germany

They indicated they considered this to be possible, considering that Vladimir Macek, one of the most pronounced of pro-German Yugoslav statesmen in the past, still is vice-premier and Branko Cudilovic, the agriculture minister, is considered a friend of Germany.

The Yugoslav affair intruded suddenly upon German-Japanese conversations which the Axis considers historic.

To all outward appearances, however, the mission of Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese foreign minister, was moving according to plan.

Matsuoka's Mission

This mission has been described by Matsuoka himself as an effort to consolidate the tri-partite pact, in which Yugoslavia is junior partner No. 3, and to make it effective as an instrument both in Europe and in Asia.

FDR Signs Bill Providing Huge Lease-Lend Fund

Secretary Stimson Indicates Britain Is Getting Many Planes

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—The $7,000,000,000 appropriation to aid nations battling the Axis was signed by President Roosevelt today on his yacht in Florida waters, while in Washington there were indications that the delivery of American airplanes to England has been accelerated in recent weeks.

Secretary of War Stimson told reporters that production of planes has shown a "very satisfactory" increase and this led to the belief that deliveries to Britain have been stepped up.

At the same time, Senator Glass (D-Va.) bluntly called for the use of American naval vessels as convoys, if German submarines impeded the delivery of defense materials to Great Britain.

U. S. Promises To Give Yugoslavia "Material Aid"

Washington Quick To Rush Assurances of Support to Belgrade

By J. C. STARK

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—The United States, acting swiftly to bolster courage and Axis defiance in Yugoslavia, today promised to give that country's new leaders effective material aid in fighting off any aggression.

Approving enthusiastically the overthrow of leaders who had aligned their country with the Axis, the government here rushed assurances of American sympathy and support to the new cabinet installed in power under young Peter II.

Even as the new government of anti-German complexion organized and moved to restore order and unity in the torn kingdom, Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, dispatched an encouraging message to Belgrade.

Administration Pleased

He instructed Arthur Bliss Lane, American minister in Belgrade, to tell the new government that:

1. The change of power was widely welcomed in the United States as a matter for self-congratulation to every liberty-loving man and woman.

2. President Roosevelt, in accordance with the terms of the Lease-Lend act, is able in the interests of national defense of the United States to render effective material assistance to nations seeking to preserve their independence and integrity against aggression.

Giving force to the American assurances was the signing today by President Roosevelt of the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

CAIRO, Egypt, March 27 (AP)—

The British announced tonight they had stormed and occupied Cheren, East Africa's major stronghold of Italian resistance, and captured Harara, second city of Ethiopia. This crumbled what may prove to be the last real ramparts of Italy's African empire.

Cheren, mountain key to Eritrea's capital, Asmara, forty-five miles to the southeast, had been defended for seven weeks by 35,000 crack Fascist troops under the command of the Duke of Aosta.

It fell to British and Indian troops after two weeks of the heaviest fighting on tortuous terrain and in treacherous climate.

Prince Paul, Deposed as Regent, Is Placed under Arrest; Anti-German Cabinet Formed

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 28 (Friday) (AP)—Yugoslavia sped its army of 1,200,000 to battle stations today on the swift pace of an anti-Nazi, pro-British coup that overthrew the regency government for joining this kingdom to the Axis, placed the boy King Peter II in full power, and held the deposed Regent Prince Paul under military arrest.

The military revolt against the Axis alignment began at 2 a. m. Thursday, and took control with the force of the army behind it.

The public, vigorously disapproved the Axis pact, hysterically cheered the new regime and called with increasing fervor for war against Germany.

The rush of men to the colors was swift, trains, automobiles and taxicabs were commandeered to take them to the frontiers; military trucks rumbled through the streets; and overhead the sky was darkened with Yugoslavia's warplanes.

German and Italian nationalists, gaily triumphant such a little time before, frantically tried to get out of the country.

Governor O'Connor indicated today that organization of the Maryland Home Guard to fill the gap left by mobilization of the Maryland National Guard will be undertaken shortly after the legislature adjourns.

Bethlehem Steel Conference May End in Accord

Company To Offer Counter Proposals to Union Demands

BETHLEHEM, Pa., March 27 (AP)—A CIO union official announced near midnight a conference with Bethlehem Steel officials had been delayed temporarily to enable the union and a federal conciliator to discuss the company's counter proposals for settlement of a strike at the firm's parent plant.

At the conclusion of SWOC meeting with the mediator, Riffe said, the union would sit down with company representatives later tonight "no matter what time it is."

BETHLEHEM, Pa., March 27 (AP)—A union official said tonight the company had formulated counter proposals to a five point program offered by the CIO Steel Workers Organizing committee for settlement of a strike at the Bethlehem Steel Company's home plant.

John V. Riffe, assistant director of the CIO union, made the announcement as he entered a mass meeting to explain the day's developments to the strikers.

"The company has agreed to enter a conference at 10:30 p. m. (EST) tonight and remain until a settlement is reached," he said.

He added he did not know what the counter proposals involved.

Two other announcements during the day indicated progress toward an agreement.

Two Optimistic Views

They were made during a recess in a conference between representatives of the CIO Steel Workers Organizing committee and W. L. Trounhauser, the company's industrial relations director.

Meanwhile, with picketing limited to a dozen men at each of the nine gates of the five-mile-long mills and state police remaining on guard, the company claimed operations on the third day of the walk-out found "more than 85 per cent of the regular force at work." An SWOC spokesman said "25 per cent would be more like it."

R. A. Lewis, general manager of the plant, said in a statement the company hoped the conference would "lead to an amicable settlement of differences in the very near future."

Thomas Lambert, U. S. labor conciliator, asserted company and union were "not too far apart" and added:

"The union has submitted a proposition and we are trying to work out the differences. We are hopeful..."

John V. Riffe, assistant director of the CIO union, expressed belief the Lewis statement indicated the company was prepared to meet "the union's terms" but did not say whether any change had been made in a "program for settlement" announced two days ago by the SWOC.

Confers with Mediators

Riffe conferred late in the day with Lambert and Charles Kutz, a Pennsylvania state mediator.

Election of collective bargaining representatives by an unaffiliated union, the Employees Representation Plan, precipitated the strike late Monday. The SWOC, contending the ERP is a company-dominated union and illegal, had said it would strike if any votes were cast in ballot boxes scattered about the plant.

A National Labor Relations Board order directed the company some months ago to break up the independent union. The company appealed the order to the courts and no decision has been made.

The union also called upon the company to take back all striking workers without discrimination, the company to halt the ERP election, the company to agree to a Labor Board election, and the company to "establish an honest system of collective bargaining."

In his statement, Lewis said he believed "it will be the spirit of everyone to recognize that the interest of the national defense program are the primary consideration."

In its plant here and six others located in New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, the Bethlehem Company holds more than a billion dollars in defense contracts—mostly for development of the nation's two-ocean navy.

Senate More Liberal

The Senate group voted to provide $450,000,000 cash. It directed that $100,000,000 of the $450,000,000 be applied to 1941 crops for which Congress already has voted $212,000,000 in payments in addition to $300,000,000 of "soil conservation" payments.

Second largest increase was $35,000,000 for financing the "stamp plan" for disposal of surplus farm products to needy persons.

The House had voted $100,000,000 for this plan in addition to $100,000,000 diverted from customs receipts. The Senate group would make $235,000,000 available in the next fiscal year.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A seventeen-year-old kid in the Balkans has lighted a fire under the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis that Herr Hitler may never succeed in putting out.

The Yugoslavian revolt against enforced alignment with the Axis is personified by young King Peter, still short of his legal majority. It is actually spear-pointed, however, by the Yugoslavian army, nearly a million strong and two thirds of it already posted in strategic positions to meet a German invasion.

That is what Hitler, his diplomatic trigger-men and his generals are actually confronted with, even before the cheering in Berlin over the visit of Japanese Foreign Minister Matsukata and Yugoslavia's entry into the Axis had died away. It is a crisis rich with irony as well as with grave military portents affecting the British-Axis war.

Knock at Back Door

The two-front war Germany has sought to avoid is obviously knocking loudly at her vulnerable Balkan back door. It is not alone stout-hearted Yugoslavian fighting men, Serbian and Montenegrin mountaineers as valiant in war as their Greek neighbors, with whom the Nazis will have to deal.

Any realistic appraisal of the suddenly altered Balkan war equation must reckon with other factors.

Hitler Demands

at the tomb of Germany's memorial to the unknown soldier in the Unter Den Linden and a long talk—in English—with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, the Japanese leader conferred for two and one-half hours with Adolf Hitler.

Then, impassive and formal as ever, Matsukata appeared on a balcony of the Reich chancellery with Hitler to receive an ovation from the throngs below in the Wilhelmplatz.

There was no hint as to whether the Yugoslav developments had any considerable part in the conversation.

May Divide Yugoslavia

Unofficial German political circles opined today that Yugoslavia knows perfectly well that for her now to renounce the Axis pact would be tantamount to giving the "go sign" to Germany to march in to compel her to live up to it.

More phrases like "bringing Yugoslav neutrality into line with the pact" were considered insufficient. That the new Yugoslav government cannot do otherwise than stick to the Axis was regarded as self-evident by German political circles.

Refusal to regard the pact as binding, it was intimated, might lead directly to dissolution of Yugoslavia much in the manner of Czechoslovakia.

Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Italy and Germany might all claim slices of the kingdom if it declined to "play ball," it was said.

An informed source in Sofia, capital of German-occupied Bulgaria, said Nazi troops were rushing toward the Yugoslav frontier, reversing the southward movement of the past four weeks.

Political circles expressed confidence, however, that the Belgrade shakeup did not affect the Yugoslav realm as far as relations with the tripartite pact members was concerned.

In the German view, the new government cannot disavow the Vienna signatures of its former premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and former foreign minister Aleksandar Cincar-Markovic.

The general belief was expressed in these circles that British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was triumphant too early and that U. S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles extended his congratulations too soon.

It must visualize victory-flashed British legions from North Africa perhaps poised to move up the Vardar valley to Yugoslavian aid. It must sense two-million Turkish bayonets, glinting in the far distance. It must weigh, too, the Russian edginess and the fact that Red army units are massed, backed by air power, in Bessarabia, dangerously close to the German-held oil fields of Rumania.

White took the floor for a long statement in answer to Lee. He pointed out that the eighth amendment to the bill specifically provides for labor's retaining the right to strike and picket, and said that the issue in the seventh amendment was not one of striking but one of "Americanism."

White said the amendment would discriminate against all classes other than striking laborers. "Strikers wearing picket badges could enter restricted areas," he said, "but the average citizen could not."

"Labor is far from getting a raw deal," White added. He asked the delegates to compare the situations of draftees at Camp Meade on $21 monthly pay with carpenters drawing $15 daily.

White referred to Lee as his "very loyal friend" and said that it was a matter of record that he had defended Lee on the House floor. But, he added, Lee did come from the sixth congressional district "where there is a heavy labor vote."

Brings Up Byron Contest

Referring to the contest now on to fill the seat of the late Congressman William D. Byron, White said he hoped Lee could get a Democrat in.

"But," he said, "it is not going to be at the price of the honor of the House of Deputies."

With sufficient delegates changing their standing on the amendment, White then moved for the suspension of rules so that the measure—shorn of the seventh amendment—could be passed. The bill sailed through on a 90-13 majority.

The House flare-up over this bill came on a day when Senator Cecil C. Squier (D-Calif.) announced that he would seek a referendum on the bill to ban fireworks.

Needs 10,000 Signatures

By obtaining 10,000 names on a petition, Squier could block enforcement of the bill until December 3, 1942—making it inoperative for the next two fourths of July. The Senate passed the measure with Squier the only dissenting voter.

On the other hand, clear sailing was indicated for the administration's unified conservation plan when associates of Dr. H. C. Byrd, University of Maryland president, said he would abandon his fight against the bill. Other reports, however, indicated he would oppose the bill when the House acts upon it.

One bill that may precipitate lively debate was set up as a special order of business in the Senate tomorrow.

Reported out unfavorably by committee, it would establish a Maryland Labor Relations Board patterned after the Wagner Act.

Boost Legislators' Pay

Earlier, the House adopted a favorable judiciary committee report on legislation providing compensation of $1,000 a year for Maryland legislators. The bill calls for a referendum in 1942.

Solons are now paid on a per diem basis. The proposed law would dock assemblymen $15 for each day of unexcused absence and give the legislature's presiding officers $250 a year in addition to the proposed compensation.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed a long third reading bill of eighty-six bills, sending fifty-two of them to the governor for signing.

Among the measures sent to the lower chamber for approval were the state administration's bills for a $2,117,000 bond issue for capital improvements and setting the real estate tax at 22-cents per $100 of assessable property in 1942 and at 20.75-cents during the next biennium.

Bill Creates Salary Board

Bills submitted to the governor included ones creating a new salary standards board to recommend wages scales for both classified and unclassified state employees; providing for the payment of pensions to certain former teachers who are ineligible under the existing teachers' retirement system; authorizing the appointment of additional parole officers and requiring firearms dealers to keep records of their sales, sending copies to police.

Enroute to the lower chamber were Senate measures permitting prisoners at county jails to work at state police stations and providing a stiff penalty for motorists driving eighty-five miles an hour or over. Such motorists would be liable to a $100 fine, imprisonment from thirty days to a year, or both.

The Lithuanian president thanked O'Connor for his "encouraging words so dear to the suffering people of my country" and added that "it will be a great pleasure for me to call upon you and to express personally my heartfelt gratitude to your excellency and the people of the sovereign state of Maryland" of the interior department.

Enroute to the lower chamber were Senate measures permitting prisoners at county jails to work at state police stations and providing a stiff penalty for motorists driving eighty-five miles an hour or over. Such motorists would be liable to a $100 fine, imprisonment from thirty days to a year, or both.

slavia's turn-about "the first major political defeat sustained by the Germans on the continent... a blow in the face for Hitler in the presence of the Japanese foreign minister (Yosuke Matsukata, who is now in Berlin)."

Danger for Germans

Should Yugoslavia go through with her apparent intention to resist the Nazis, it was added, the whole course of matters in the southeast would be radically changed; the German high command would be put in the position of having to move with a flank uncovered—a dangerous maneuver—if it moved at all.

It was suggested here that British military action in aid of the Yugoslavians would be set off by a request from King Peter II of Yugoslavia and a hostile movement by the Germans themselves.

Prime Minister Churchill's announcement of the sharply changed atmosphere in Belgrade came toward the end of a speech before the conservative party central committee in which he had reviewed Britain's successes to date, putting at the top of his list a "supreme event more blessed than victories... the rousing of the spirit of the great American nation and its ever more intimate association with the common cause."

Ministers under Arrest

"Early this morning the Yugoslav nation found its soul. A revolution has taken place in Belgrade and ministers who yesterday signed away the honor and freedom of their country are reported to be under arrest."

"This patriotic movement arises from the wrath of a valiant and warlike race at their country's being betrayed by the weakness of its rulers and the foul intrigues of the Axis powers."

"We may, therefore, cherish hope—I speak, of course, only on information that has reached me—that a Yugoslav government will be formed worthy to defend the freedom and the integrity of their country."

"Such a government in its brave endeavor will receive from the British empire—and I doubt not in its own way from the United States—all possible aid and succor."

Expresses Confidence

The prime minister's expressions on the war in general embodied a declaration of confidence that the battle of the Atlantic would be won decisively—"before many months have passed" but with a customary warning that it was going to be a hard road "until we finally have beaten down Satan under our feet."

He declined again to attempt to "catalogue... the exact settlement of affairs" to be made when the peace comes, saying in effect that the first job was to win and adding: "I was very glad to see that the illustrious leader of the American people, President Roosevelt, is of the same opinion, though in our correspondence the topic has never been mentioned."

As Britain's "series of notable victories"—in which he put the "routing" of the United States as the greatest, Churchill listed:

The "deliverance" of Dunkerque; the RAF's "frustration" of Hitler's invasion plans; the "frustration" of the Nazi attempt to "cow and terrorize" the civilian British from the air; "the destruction of Italian power and empire in Africa."

push aside pickets to make way for the returning workers. The pickets resisted. Clubs and sticks were swung and thrown, and in a few minutes there were many bloody heads.

The police finally gained control and the workers entered the plant without taking any part in the skirmish. Police Chief E. H. Duckett estimated that 600 workers passed into the plant for its resumption of operations.

C. C. Calkins, superintendent of the plant, said, "the company has no choice but to reopen the plant for the majority of employees who desire to return to work."

Union demands included an increase in the basic minimum hourly day wage from fifty-five to seventy-five cents for men and from thirty-five to sixty-five cents for women, abolition of piecework and specific re-employment guarantees and partial pay for workers inducted into military service.

Demands Congress Act

As twenty-five persons were injured in a clash between pickets and police at the International Harvester Company plant at Richmond, Ind., and other strikes dotted the defense landscape, insistent demands were heard in Congress for action to end such work stoppages.

Solemnly Chairman Sumners (D-

Knox and Knudsen Deny Sending Ultimatum

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—Secretary Knox and Defense Director Knudsen telegraphed Philip Murray, president of the CIO, today that their message to the Allis Chalmers company to resume work was not an ultimatum—but an appeal to the patriotism and loyalty of workers and management.

Knox and Knudsen said that their decision to ask reopening of the strike-bound Milwaukee plant was made "after the fact was established that the original strike vote was obtained by fraudulent means."

"To continue the strike in view of this and subject critical defense material to further indefinite delay would seem entirely unreasonable," the officials said.

Murray had asked "by what powers" the navy secretary and Knudsen were "authorized to issue ultimatums."

officers were cut off before they could retreat.

Italian casualties in the siege—up to yesterday—were placed at between 3,000 and 4,000, although British spokesmen said this was only a rough estimate.

Fascist Losses Heavy

Fascist losses in the final action were described as very heavy.

Since February 2 the British had been at the gates of Cherem, on which they marched following their swift eastward push from Kassala, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan frontier town late in January.

Asthey retreated, the Italians blew up the only western road to the town, causing hundreds of tons of rock to slide down the mountain side.

This blocked the British were left the alternative of storming 6,000-foot heights.

Defense Production Under Handicaps

IT WAS TO BE EXPECTED that drastic steps would sooner or later be taken by some agency, or agencies, of the federal government to halt the strikes that have stopped vital defense material production in plants throughout the country. Such a step has been taken jointly by William F. Knudsen, OPM director, and Secretary of the Navy Knox in ordering the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company to resume production at once on all vital defense orders. In the opinion of many, some kind of action in this and in other cases has been long overdue.

Establishment of the new National Defense Mediation Board was hopefully hailed as a step in the direction of industrial peace, which is so urgently needed in the production of defense materials needed both at home and in the program of aid to Britain. Its effectiveness can, of course, be determined only by experience, and, as this newspaper has pointed out, it should have a chance to demonstrate its usefulness. But grave doubts are being entertained as to its possibilities, as it develops that it operates under severe handicaps.

For one thing, as Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, has pointed out, the board has no real power to enforce its decisions. The most it can do is to align public opinion back of a decision. That would ultimately prove a powerful force; but before that can be attained, the board must do its stuff, and it cannot do that because of a formidable obstacle. This is the requirement that it must first be called upon to act under a certification by the secretary of Labor. Madam Perkins could not be expected to make such certification until she had exhausted every effort to settle strikes through the conciliation agency of her own department. By making any certification before doing that she would be placing herself in the position of confessing the failure of her own department.

This requirement is the worst phase of the several handicaps faced by the new mediation board. It fully dispels any idea that the board could step in and mediate should a strike occur in any major industry in which defense production is under way. That is what it ought to be able to do. In view of the whole distressing situation, which is reaching an alarming stage, it is a pity that the new board was clothed with this major handicap and also that definite arrangement for a "cooling off" process during which operations would be continued could not have been provided as was recommended by Mr. Knudsen.

Industrial peace is vital now and it will have to be brought about some way or other in face of the extremely urgent need for defense production. The quicker and easier it can be attained the better.

Efficiency Needed As Well As Money

ALTHOUGH he opposed the Lease-Lend measure, Representative Taber, of New York, did the obvious and commendable thing in pledging his support of the law and urging others to do likewise. But at the same time he called attention to another important consideration, to which allusion has hitherto been made in this department.

While the lease-lend policy may be fixed, the question of how well the administration of the law is carried out is, as Taber declared, a different matter. If seven billions of our taxpayers' money for aid to Britain is to have the maximum effect desired, administration of its machinery must be as efficient as it is humanly possible.

This means, as Taber also pointed out, that the Washington administration should deal more realistically with the fundamental issue of coordinating defense production. The confusing, hamstrung dual directorate of the Office of Production Management should be corrected. Deadwood of the New Deal era of pre-emergency days that is costly and adds nothing to the effort of defense production should be rooted out.

In short, the situation calls for a realistic, firm and direct leadership for properly carrying out the purposes of the lease-lend program.

Skittles, Beer, Jots, Tittles and Such

THERE IS no good reason why one cannot enjoy skittles without beer. Why cannot a tittle be added or subtracted without also putting on or taking away a jot? It simply isn't done. Beer goes with skittles and jots with tittles (any resemblance to lyric poetry, living or dead, is purely coincidental) and that is that, regardless of lexicographers.

And how about dudgeons? Every day you see or hear somebody or other in a high dudgeon. But have you ever seen or heard anybody in a low dudgeon? For some reason wholly unexplained, no self-respecting citizen would be found dead in a low dudgeon, to say nothing of being discovered alive in one.

While we are on the subject, it is one of our long-cherished ambitions to find somebody who will admit that he or she is in fair-to-middling fettle. We fear that our ambition never will be realized. One has no choice. One must be in fine fettle or in no fettle at all. The submit, is grossly unfair and probably unconstitutional. Every freeborn American citizen has a right to be in any sort of fettle that suits him best. But the tyranny of public opinion requires him to be in fine fettle, if in any.

We could say much more, but our protests would fall on ears that hear not. So we might as well reconcile ourselves to a world wherein every skittle has its beer and every tittle has its jot; where every dudgeon is high and every fettle is fine. But there ought to be a law.

Unemployment Question Is Still Hazy

IT IS TOO BAD that this country, at the height of its unemployment problem, did not allocate to some of its abundant bureaus the task of keeping an accurate check of those who do not have jobs and what their capacities for job-holding are.

This thought arises in connection with the request of Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, that all unemployed report whatever degree of skill they may have, as that skill is urgently needed. An up-to-the-minute organization would have had this information available at all times, together with the exact number of the unemployed.

It is commonly supposed that there are 5,000,000 employable Americans without jobs. Even that notion is not invested with certainty. William Green, of the AFL, estimates that there are 8,000,000 unemployed, while John Lewis puts the figure at 9,000,000 despite the draft defense program has placed upon labor. Lewis is of the opinion that preparedness will not greatly reduce this number.

It would ease the mind of the American public, hopeful of at least a temporary relief from unemployment through the defense program, to be assured that unemployment is yielding to the industrial upsurge. But these conflicting claims deny the public that assurance.

The Government Gets Into Industry

ONE IMPRESSIVE MEASURE of America's effort for defense and in aid to Britain is the statement of William S. Knudsen that $2,138,000,000 is being expended on new industrial plants. Of this amount $1,600,000,000 represents government plants, $393,000,000 is for 421 privately-financed plants, and $171,000,000 is going into plants which Britain has financed and which this government may soon take over.

The government has 302 plants built or building, all of which will be completed by July. These include: aircraft engines, eleven; planes, twenty; plane parts and accessories, sixty-six; explosives, eleven; small arms ammunition, three; shells, bombs and torpedoes, eighteen; munitions loading, nine; machine guns, five; other small arms, two; artillery, twenty-seven; ships, forty; tanks, five; armor plate and forgings, twelve; machine tools, twenty; optical instruments, nine; metals, seven; pumps and blowers, five; ship engines and propulsion machinery, three; miscellaneous, including chemicals, ten; rehabilitated arsenals, nineteen.

It is plain from this that the government will have quite an impressive industrial set-up of its own after the war unless such of the plants as can be used in peace-time functions are turned over to private enterprise later.

War Opinion Can Quickly Change, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, March 27—In spite of all that has happened to push this country closer to war the most recent polls of public opinion, for whatever they are worth, show little if any increase in the willingness of our people to go to war. The percentage is still eighty-three per cent to eighty-five per cent opposed.

Hugh S. Johnson

which is about what it has been for a year.

Yet a similar poll among Washington correspondents, policy making federal officials and certainly among army and navy officials would, in the opinion of most observers, show a majority opinion in at least that percentage that we will be in the shooting front of this war before the summer is out and perhaps much sooner.

Of course no such poll could or should be taken, except perhaps among the newspaper men. To that extent, the latter statement is a guess. But it is a good guess. When, after talking with dozens of such people, you can find nobody of a contrary opinion and nobody who knows of any important contrary opinion, it is a pretty sure sign that people of any different belief are few and far between.

Old Axiom Fades

This is a very remarkable situation, probably without precedent. It has been almost an axiom in the past that you can't take a democracy into a war against the will of large segments of its people or that it could be done, it ought not to be done because of the weakness of democracy. This principle seems to have little bearing today. The saying is:

"Oh, they'll come along. They did in 1917 when the country had just voted for Wilson because he kept us out of war and when, at the beginning, certainly half of the people didn't want war."

That is also a good guess, although it is nothing more than a guess. But Mr. Roosevelt has shown more ability to direct popular opinion than any leader we ever had, and the past and probable future sequence of events has all led or points in the direction of war.

There is good ground for believing that the present presidential election is to take decisions and place action in quiet surroundings for the crisis in world affairs that certainly lies not more than sixty days ahead—the tightening blockade of Britain and the possible assault across the Channel, Hitler's decision to attack the Balkans, Japan's decision in the Pacific, and Russia as to Turkey and the Dardanelles. Never was there a more anxious moment.

Convoys Is Swiftest Path

In the question of ocean convoys by our navy or American-financed aid to Britain lies the surest, swiftest path toward war for us. The logic of the convoy proposal is hard to beat. This vast armament in our hands is valuable for our own defense. In British hands it aids in our defense. At the bottom of the Atlantic it aids nobody but the Nazis. Are we spending billions for Hitler to sink?

It is true that it remains to be seen how much he can sink without our intervention. But if he is even reasonably successful, what do we do? Some advocates of convoys say:

"Oh, we don't need to go to war over the sinking of a few escort vessels any more than we went to war when the Japs destroyed the U. S. S. Panay."

There isn't much in that. The Japs claimed that was an accident and indemnified the loss. If the Germans fire on our flag, sink any part of our navy and kill our sailors, it won't be an accident and can't be disavowed. That overwhelming majority against war will begin to fade out.

Another Angle

Even if it doesn't, there is another unavoidable angle. If we attempt to crash the blockade by sinking German naval ships or aircraft, Germany can't ignore that any more than we could. She would

SPRING SOWING

Strike Situation Is Up to Congress And It Now Faces a Tragic Dilemma

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, March 27—The strikes are up to Congress. A large majority of Congress are willing to act, even eager to act. But Congress is faced by the tragic dilemma that faces everybody.

Mark Sullivan

For the sake of impressing the world that America has national unity about the war, for the sake of preserving the morale of Britain and the other democracies for psychological effect upon neutral countries, for encouraging conquered peoples—for these and other reasons, Congress wishes to make an impression of solidarity behind the president's war position. It wishes not to take up any measures that the president may not desire taken, nor measures likely to excite controversy. In this spirit, Congress refrains from doing anything about strikes. Yet, ironically, these strikes are by far the greatest detriment to our defense and to our contribution of help to Britain.

Like Carburator

It is not merely that the president does not ask for legislation about strikes—he makes it clear that he does not want such legislation. He speaks lightly of the effect of the strikes, saying they affect only a small fraction of the total defense effort—this presidential statement is well met by those who point out that many of the strikes take place at key points at bottle-necks; that the carburator is only a small fraction of an automobile, but that an obstruction at the carburator stalls the car.

Moreover, from the standpoint of the president, and especially the standpoint of the more "leftist" New Dealers who have weight with the president, the strikes are not looked upon exclusively, hardly even primarily, with a view to their effect upon production of war goods. The war aspect of the strikes overlaps upon the domestic policy of the New Deal to build up labor into a powerful political force.

Interference Opposed

In the nature of the case, such New Dealers do not want the strikes interfered with, because they must look upon the strikes as a means for further gains of power by labor, especially C. I. O. They do not wish Congress to act upon the

Martin Does a Good Service

From The New York Herald Tribune

By deciding to stay on as chairman of the Republican party Congressman Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, is doing his party an important service. Few Republicans have shown greater gifts of leadership. None has as many ties with as many factions in the party. Furthermore, as minority leader in the House of Representatives Mr. Martin is the spearhead of Republican action in Congress. This has placed him in the forefront of Republican activities in Washington—a difficult post in these days of inner division in the Republican party.

Republicans are between two fires—demands that they accept without question the administration's many proposals in connection with national defense and the prompting of those professional politicians who believe that it is the duty of an opposition party to oppose everything all the time on general principles. Between the two extremes lies the course which most Republicans in the public life will steer. But the fact that spokesmen for so many different groups in the party joined in urging Mr. Martin to continue as chairman suggests that if new American naval base there.

Task of Choosing Typical Mother Seen Not Easy

By EDWIN C. HILL

Nominations for the America Mother, in the annual selection under the auspices of the Golden Rule Foundation will close March 31. Essential qualifications, as outlined by the Foundation, seem to impose standards somewhat higher than might be reasonably expected of the American father, or son or daughter. Consider the requirements:

Edwin C. Hill

First—She must have an outstanding record as a successful mother; this standard not to be fixed by the size of her family, but by the character, personality and achievements of her individual children.

Second—She must embody those traits most highly regarded in mothers: courage, moral strength, patience, affection, sympathetic understanding, home-making ability.

Third—She must make friends readily and be able to meet people easily in her duties as The American Mother.

Fourth—She must have a sense of social and world relationships, including participation in constructive work for public benefit in her own community.

King Solomon set up his paragon of housewifely perfection in much the same manner, but added thoughtfully, "But where can such a woman be found?" The Golden Rule Foundation will find her, no doubt, but age-old is the gulf between the ideal and the typical. It is perhaps harder to bridge it now than it was in King Solomon's day.

A Tall Order

"She looketh well unto the ways of her household." That pretty nearly told the story of a competent, if not ideal mother, then and for centuries thereafter. But now, look again at item No. 4, of the above specifications: "She must have a sense of social and world relationships." That's a pretty tall order for even the men folks of the family, in a day when there isn't any sense in social or world relationships. And that No. 2 item, setting up par for the course in various maternal virtues, tops anything Solomon specified.

It seems to this onlooker that we may make great satisfaction in the assurance that they will find a mother like that, as they have in the past. I doubt if Solomon could have found one, particularly on the count of understanding and mixing in helpfully in world relationships and public affairs. But, if the ideal is even remotely attainable, the typical comes along in due time.

Jordan's Definition

I recall a dinner company in which there was a rather high-flown conversation in which the guests were groping for an enumeration and definition of the most essential virtues. They finally boiled down to wisdom and virtue, but couldn't manage a satisfactory definition of these. The late David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford University, had been parked inconspicuously behind his valium moustache during the dinner, never saying a word. Finally, in a bull in the storm of talk, he murmured, "Wisdom is knowing what to do next and virtue is doing it."

Good mothers are like that. Whether it's a dash of iodine on a hurt finger or a swift strategic move in some family disaster, they know what to do and they do it—no always infallibly, of course. And I am inclined to think that no elaboration of ideal requirements ever will carry us far beyond that sound maternal penchant for quick understanding and effective action. In other words they effectively combine wisdom and virtue.

Humor Needed

But as long as the Golden Rule Foundation is stacking up these "essential qualifications," I can't help wishing they had put in just a little dash of humor. The humor of the successful mother is akin to pity, suffused with deep understanding, and somehow attuned to a wider and deeper sense of proportion than any of the traditional masculine traits.

We cite Maggie Shand in Barrie's play, "What Every Woman Knows," mischievously getting the number of that beloved but somewhat fat-headed husband of hers. There's something a bit esoteric in this working technique of Goethe's "eternal feminine" which, we have an idea, even the Golden Rule Foundation will really ferret out.

But these are matters of the head rather than the heart, and no abstraction of motherly virtues will change everyman's profound and unshakable conviction that he had the ideal mother. The Foundation left love out of its list. A mother's capacity for infinite love and forgiveness makes other virtues secondary—again in the heart and memory of everyman.

BIDDING GUIDES PLAY

YOU WILL play for your contract one way if the opponents have done no bidding at all. If they have done a small amount of bidding, you may alter the normal plan slightly. But if one of them has shown extreme length in some suit or suits, thereby betokening extreme shortness in others, you may adopt a method of play which is almost the reverse of the otherwise normal.

Bidding about like that occurred at still another table of the duplicate game where these cards were dealt. Other tables produced contracts of 4-Hearts by West, who made the grade in each case by about similar methods, but there was a wide divergence in play of the two contracts of 5-Spades by South.

In each case West led the diamond A, ruffed by the spade 2.

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Also in each case South then led to the club K. Then one declarer went awry. He led the spade Q and sent it through to the singleton K. West returned his diamond 6 to the K. South discarding a heart. Having impoverished the dummy of entries, this South later lost tricks to the spade J and the club Q, so was down two.

The other 5-Spades declarer, after going to dummy with the club 9 to the K on the second trick, led the club 8 and played the 4 on it. West ruffing with his singleton spade K. He returned the diamond 6, the K being ruffed with the spade 5. The heart 3 then was ruffed by the spade 6 and the club 10 finessed. The club A then dropped the Q, and South led his last club, the J, discarding a diamond from North. East could get nothing now except one trick, even ruffing this, so the contract was made.

With South playing the hand at 6-No Trumps, why should East cover the lead of the diamond J with his K midway during the play?

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 27 (AP)—

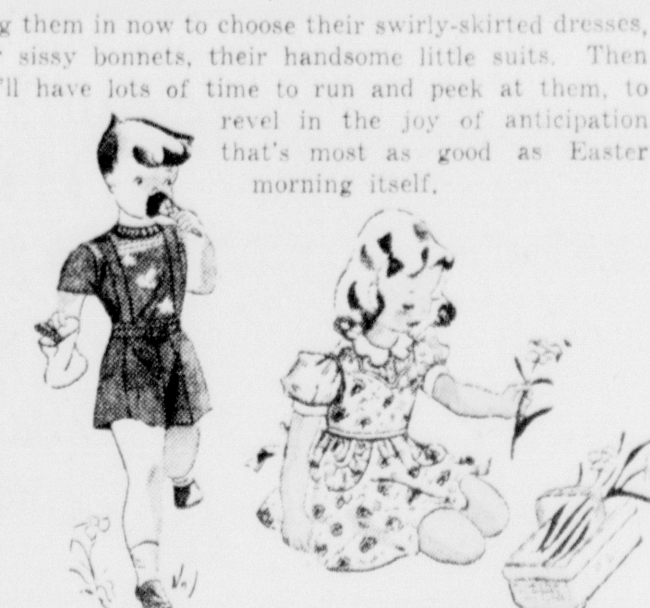

A favorable report was adopted in the Senate on a resolution requesting the State Roads Commission to name the Philadelphia Road (Route 40) the Gov. Harry W. Nice highway.

Another resolution, asking the roads board to designate the Bel Air Road (Route 1) as the Augustine Hermann Highway, was advanced toward final passage.

Two other resolutions asking that the Philadelphia Road be named the Francis Scott Key Highway and the Gov. Parca Highway were killed.

Explosions Cause Loss of Hearing In Great Britain

Treatment of Ear Injuries Is Discussed by Noted Physician

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

We hear from English physicians and surgeons a great deal about their changed experiences in war time. One very common condition in London and the bombed areas of England has been rupture of the ear drum simply from the noise of explosions. The noise of continuous explosions may cause deafness of several days, or even weeks' duration, simply from exhaustion of the auditory nerve.

The London physicians find that an intense, shrill noise is more likely to produce nerve deafness by injury to the delicate ear organs of hearing than a louder, more booming sound. The air blast that accompanies loud explosions may be forceful enough to rupture the early drums of persons near to the source of the explosion, but the explosion of a small gun, on account of the high pitch of the noise, is more likely to injure the nerve endings of the auditory nerve.

Damp Cotton Useful
The most useful protective and the simplest is found to be putting damp cotton in the ear canal.

But ear injuries are not confined to war areas. Slapping a child over the ear in chastisement or in rough play between children, the bursting of an inflated bag close to the ear, or the blow of boxing gloves may cause a rupture of the ear drum. Burns of the face which involve the external ear very frequently do serious damage to the organ of hearing and cause more or less permanent deafness.

Of course, injuries to the skull, automobile injuries, etc., which result in fracture, frequently extend through the temporal bone, which contains the internal ear, and cause deafness and dizziness.

Avoid Home Aids
Ear surgeons with large experience warn against certain kinds of emergency treatment of any ear injury. It is advisable not to try to syringe the external auditory canal or to put any drops in the ear under any circumstances unless, of course, this is done by an ear surgeon who knows what he is doing and has some reason for it. Experience teaches that the greatest cause of infection of the middle and internal ear structures is washing out the canal or the instillation of drops as a first-aid treatment in injuries or burns of the ear. Not only may infection be carried into the middle ear if the drum is ruptured, but if the injury has been protected by the formation of a clot, syringing may wash the clot loose and expose the middle ear to invasion.

The best emergency treatment is to apply a dry dressing of gauze and cotton over the ear and allow it to stay there until the ear is examined and properly treated by an ear surgeon.

Questions and Answers

D. A.:—"Please tell what makes a man belch often, particularly after meals."

Answer—Belching is common to many forms of indigestion. It may occur from ulcer of the stomach, nervousness or gall bladder inflammation—most likely the last named.

J. J. J.:—"What is the cause and remedy for gums that work away from the teeth?"

Answer—the cause may be pyorrhea. Some people have constitutionally recessive gums. In most cases only good dentistry will effect a cure. Proper tooth brushing at the gum margin to stimulate the gums is important.

M. G.:—"Is there any complete cure for fallen arches, that is, by exercising, the use of arch supports and prescribed shoes? Can a chiroprapist really build up broken-down arches or does he give only temporary relief? My work requires many hours standing and I find myself weary at the end of the day. At the age of 25, is it too late to get permanent relief?"

Answer—In most instances of flat-foot, the foot can be strengthened by exercise and proper shoes so that at least functional restoration is complete. Anatomical restoration is not so simple but there is no case of flat-foot that cannot be benefited by proper treatment.

A. R.:—"What causes an inflamed and irritated condition of the colon resulting in too much mucus and diarrhea? Does prolonged treatment of Kaolin and aluminum hydroxide injure the acid-forming glands of the stomach?"

Answer—There are a number of conditions which cause irritation and inflammation of the colon, or large bowel. One of these is amoebiasis, resulting in amoebic dysentery. Other germs will cause ulcers in the colon. Simple inflammation and irritated colon with mucus and diarrhea is usually caused by an underlying nervous condition. The use of Kaolin and aluminum hydroxide over quite a period of time has not been found to be injurious to the acid-forming glands of the stomach.

A Problem Solved

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP)—This housewife used her head. She confided in friends that she had reached an agreement with a chef at a nearby restaurant whereby the latter would supply prepared meals secretly for several days so that the little lady could get proper recognition from her visiting in-laws.

Paper cups should be secured and used for starting seeds of plants, such as melons, which move badly from ordinary flats, or for seeds which are too scarce of value to risk in the open ground.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, another way in which these paper cups are valuable is to protect such plants as tomatoes against cutworms, which have a special fondness for the young plants. The cups should be set into the ground so that an inch at least will be above ground.

When the paper cups are used, the bottoms, of course, is cut off and the plants can be set into the ground without disturbing the ball of earth about the roots.

Two Face Charges In Death of Woman

CRISFIELD, Md., March 27 (AP)—Charges will be filed against two persons in the death of 25-year-old Marie Swift, of Crisfield, at a hearing before Trial Magistrate Fred Holland Saturday afternoon. State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddix said today. Maddix said a 45-year-old woman had admitted attempting to perform an illegal operation on the young garment worker, whose body was found along a roadside near here on Tuesday morning.

The state's attorney said he regarded the case against the woman and against Miss Swift's intended husband, who will also be arraigned, as virtually complete. The accused woman's son, he said, will be held as a material witness.

Maddix said the woman confessed to him after seven hours' steady questioning. He said the first break in the case came when the woman's son admitted helping to dispose of Miss Swift's body.

Maddix said he would ask that the woman be held on a charge of manslaughter.

Maddix said the accused woman was the mother of four children.

"Raspberry" Handed Back to Dr. Byrd

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 27 (AP)—The House of Delegates today handed back the "raspberry" to Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland.

At a party given for the legislators last week Dr. Byrd served them raspberry ice cream from the school's dairy plant.

Today a resolution averred that whereas there had been certain remarks concerning the respective merits of the party ice cream and that manufactured by Delegate J. Herbert McElwee (D-Wash.), therefore:

"Be it resolved by the House of Delegates of Maryland that it is the sense of the House of Delegates that the ice-cream manufactured by Delegate McElwee is superior in taste, texture and tang to that produced by the esteemed Dr. Byrd."

Gordon Opposed to Large Wildlife Refuge

BELTSVILLE, Md., March 27 (AP)—The Isaac Walton League of America was warned by Seth Gordon, executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission today that wildlife refuges of "enormous size" defeat their own purpose.

Speaking at the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Patuxent station, Gordon told delegates to the nineteenth annual Walstonian convention that protected areas should not be large enough to enable birds and mammals to spend their entire lives within the refuges.

The protected areas, he said, should be designed for harboring and increasing wildlife "for the benefit of the surrounding territories."

Many protected areas set aside by states, he continued, were "refuges on paper only."

Not Enough Old Maids To Hold a Party

GIRDETREE, Md., March 27 (AP)—Girdetree has a sparsity of spinsters.

The women of the Methodist church here voted to hold a church party for old maids during the latter part of April. They outlined the program and arranged for refreshments, only to find that old maids in Girdetree are scarce as hen's teeth.

Only two could be mustered at first count, so the church pastor, Rev. D. J. Givan, has been delegated to find enough spinsters to make the party interesting.

Soft Coal Prices Pegged for 2 Years

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—The House today passed legislation to continue for two years federal regulation of minimum prices for soft coal.

Passage by a voice vote was virtually without opposition.

The bill now goes to the Senate for action before expiration of the Guffey Coal Act April 26. It would change the present coal act only by establishment of the consumer's counsel as a wholly independent agency. The counsel now is a part of the Federal Trade Commission.

Balkan News Featured By British Editors

LONDON, March 28 (Friday) (AP)—Big black headlines and long stories telling of the anti-Axis coup in Yugoslavia and of British successes against Italy in Africa crowded pictures of Britain's king and queen out of the British press today.

Pictures of a Royal visit to a Canadian camp scheduled for release to morning papers were held up to make room for the welcome news which editors agreed may be a decisive turning point in the war.

Weather in Nearby States

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA—Mostly cloudy, followed by occasional light rain and colder today afternoon and night; clearing and somewhat colder Saturday.

WEST VIRGINIA—Mostly cloudy with occasional light rain today and in north portion Friday night; somewhat colder Friday night; clearing and somewhat colder Saturday.

Frederick Sidewalks Alarm City Fathers

FREDERICK, Md., March 27 (AP)—Municipal officials have shown a growing concern over the state of Frederick's sidewalks as a result of suits and threats of suits.

A city-wide campaign to compel property owners to repair or replace rough sidewalks now is being considered to protect the city from suits filed by persons injured in falls.

Every time somebody falls and is injured the city is sued for damages, the aldermen said, and "something should be done about it."

City officials explained that the city is responsible to notify property owners to correct defects in their sidewalks, but the property owner is responsible for maintaining them.

Members of the board of aldermen expressed themselves as favorable to a plan to revert suits filed against the city to the property owner considered negligent.

Measles Epidemic Continues in State

BALTIMORE, March 27 (AP)—Maryland's measles epidemic, with 789 reported cases of the disease recorded so far this year, shows no signs of abating, Assistant Health Director Dr. C. H. Halliday said today.

No great variance in the daily totals has been noted within the past week, Dr. Halliday said, explaining that the reported number was probably considerably smaller than the actual number of cases. Many families do not consult a physician for measles, he said.

So far this month, 367 cases of the disease have been reported, compared with 232 during February and only fifty in January. In addition, Dr. Halliday said, 343 cases of German measles have been recorded during the first three months of the year.

Minister Beaten

BELGRADE, March 28 (Friday) (AP)—Anti-Axis demonstrators dragged Swedish Minister Malm from his car and beat him severely because the minister, speaking German, was believed to be a German citizen.

The 60-year-old envoy was in a serious condition.

Thousands

had been reported in flight to Hungary or Greece.

A new government headed by the tough old air corps chief, Gen. Dusan Simovic, with the 17-year-old King Peter handed full sovereignty, gave short shrift to the apologetic German ambassador, Viktor von Heeren.

Von Heeren rushed to the foreign office Thursday morning as soon as Peter formed a new cabinet.

He took exactly six minutes to state the German position—reported abroad to be a virtual ultimatum.

Keeps Attitude Secret

When he asked about the new government's attitude towards the Axis pact which the old regime signed Tuesday at Vienna, it was reported that the new foreign minister, Nomicchio Nomic, replied merely:

"I can't tell you that yet."

Otherwise, the policy of the new government will be based on friendship for the Axis, Nomic is reported to have added.

Neutral diplomats, however, said this was merely an attempt to stall for the time while the military and internal situations were consolidated in preparation for war.

Public Belligerent

"Despite official 'hedging' there was no mistaking the belligerent temper of the populace. All seemed to believe that this country finally had a real 'war cabinet' which would break with Germany and Italy."

Greek diplomats jubilantly declared that with even a part of the Yugoslav army to assist their troops could complete the occupation of Albania in three weeks at most, and then with British aid 2,200,000 tough fighting men would be ready to confront the Nazis.

The Yugoslav public demonstrations for war against the Axis made clear that thousands here desired just such a development.

The "revolution" itself was virtually a bloodless affair, loosed on an unsuspecting government at 2 a. m. Thursday.

Eight hours later the turnover was so complete that King Peter met his new cabinet at the fortress in the heart of the city and rode resplendent on a white charger through the main streets while the cheering people pelted him with flowers.

Army Solid for Peter

Reports from the provinces were scanty, but indicated that the coup followed a pattern similar to that in Belgrade, with all the army, from the topmost officers to the lowliest privates wholeheartedly supporting the new regime.

During the afternoon crowds smashed the windows and sacked both Italian and German travel agencies on Belgrade's main streets.

The capital was decorated with Yugoslav, British, Greek and United States flags.

There were continuous demonstrations on the main street against the Axis powers and cheers for Britain and Greece.

Crowds gathered before the American legation and gave Minister Lane great ovations when he entered and left the building.

Women, Children Want War

All day and far into the night throngs of women and children in frenzied jubilation milled about the streets, shouting for war.

The spectacular military putsch which placed King Peter II on the throne and gave the country an anti-Axis government put a great question mark on the Balkan future and possibly the tide of the whole war.

The new foreign minister, Nomicchio Nomic, gave the German minister, Viktor von Heeren, assurances that Yugoslavia's foreign policy would be based on friendship for the Axis but nothing was decided on the question of the tripartite pact, whose signers were ousted from office and jailed.

The entire population, however, seemed to believe that the country now had a "war cabinet" which would immediately renounce the pact signing, break relations with Germany and Italy, help put an end to the Albanian campaign, and even join Greek troops, possibly in war with Germany.

Terms of the Axis pact but give not another inch, meanwhile maintaining the army at full war strength in "case of emergency."

Neutral diplomats, however, called this "window dressing"—an attempt to stall for time while Yugoslav military and internal situations are being consolidated in preparation for the widely-anticipated German attempt to take over the country with troops now in Bulgaria and Austria.

Greeks Expect Aid

Greek diplomats made no secret of their belief they would get Yugoslav aid.

"With just a part of Yugoslavia's army to aid" one of them said, "we can clean up Albania in two or three weeks, then throw 300,000 troops now occupied there into meeting any German attack."

"With our entire army and the British now in Greece and the Yugoslav we would have more than 2,200,000 men—all of them tough fighters."

doubt that such a program was the wish of those thousands who shouted themselves hoarse from dawn until midnight for war against the Axis.

They wrecked the German-Italian travel agencies, smashing large plate-glass windows, strewn furniture and papers about, tearing Nazi and Fascist flags to shreds and trampling pictures of Hitler and Mussolini.

Widely excited demonstrators attacked and battered Germans and Italians in the streets.

Rep. Sumners in

see to it that agitators, communists and German agents shall not obstruct the necessary program of production. I believe that it is. We cannot delay in such a matter.

"If the president needs further legislation, all he has to do is to ask for it. x x x I am confidently expecting adequate action by the president upon his return."

Three Bridges Lead To the Army

PORTLAND, Me. (AP)—Three bridges, eleven teeth and the mayor of Waterville kept Private Joseph Mercier in the army.

Rejected from his National Guard outfit because he had defective teeth, the Waterville youth hurried home, put in some long hours in the dentist's chair and prepared to go back to Portland. He couldn't find transportation until Mayor Paul A. Dundas personally took matters in hand by driving him the 88 miles to the company encampment. And just in time to halt the company commander from signing official discharge papers.

That Stopped 'Em

DENVER (AP)—Carl Sandburg the poet, likes something about every town.

In Denver, the pawnshop windows fascinate him. He made this rhyme about them:

"The ten-gallon hats,

That he says, suggests the nostaic aura of the old west that the windows, many filled with guns and cowboy equipment, bring to mind.

Windjammers Come Back

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—War has turned back the pages of maritime practice. They're putting old time sailing vessels back into service. The preserved

Sailors' Union of the Pacific has received requests for crews to man windjammers which include the former gambling ships Rex and Tango.

One of the last stands of the sailing ships was the Alaska salmon fisheries, and as late as 1925 San Francisco bay was dotted with picturesque three and four masted vessels ready to sail north. Now, with a world shipping shortage, many interests with the old hulks had been sailing vessels back into service. The preserved

THE DAILY STORY DIVERSION

Even in the Best Made Plans of Love, a Certain Amount of Politics Must Be Played

BY CHARLES WHITE

"You can't do this to me, Marlin—not to an old pal who would walk over coals of fire for you," Johnny protested vehemently, ramming around Joe Marlin's booking office angrily.

Marlin shrugged. "Nobody's asking you to walk on anything but a stage, pal," he reminded sourly. "Am I your booking agent or not?"

"Sure, Marlin. But I thought you were a friend at the same time."

Wait until I have a chin-vest with Kay, you double-crosser! We'll see what gives!"

Marlin wrinkled his brow. "Don't waste your time and your breath. pal. I've talked it over with Kay and she's all set to go.

Johnny couldn't believe that the romance in his life could be so curdled as to have agreed to Marlin's old-center proposition. Even if the break was one that Kay had been waiting for—for herself and Johnny, true enough—he couldn't convince himself that 40 weeks on the big wheel could entice her away from all the things they had planned for themselves! He stormed out of Marlin's office and tore up the pavement all the way to Kay's hotel.

"Are you pulling out with that louse of a Steele and leaving me up in the air, like Marlin says?" he demanded before the young blonde vision had got the door fairly open. She reached out a thin hand and dragged him inside gently.

"Subside, Lochinvar!" she commanded firmly, pulling him over to a comfortable chair and pushing him into it. "I gather that you've been adding two and two again—with the usual results!"

Johnny looked stricken. "You mean your contract hasn't been signed—that you didn't really mean to go out for 40 weeks?"

Kay smiled. "I do mean to take the contract—but not with Del. Sometimes I don't think you're quite as bright as my romantic estimate of you deludes me into thinking you are!"

"Don't mess around with words, honey! Give it to me straight. What's cooking?"

"You darling nitwit!" Kay sympathized. "Can't you see what our pal is doing? He's using Steele merely because he thinks that Steele is giving Stella too much of a rush—and Marlin is right on the verge of popping that certain question to Stella himself!"

"He's knifing me just to get Steele out of the way, huh? Wait until I get my hands around that conniver's throat!" Johnny heaved truculently, but Kay held him down firmly.

"Take it easy, darling. This is the time to fight Marlin with his own fire, and maybe do some good for us too! I already had a little confab with Stella!"

"Say, what's going on here?" Johnny demanded.

"It's elemental, sweet. Marlin would use you just as quickly as he would Steele—only he sees a good chance to kill two birds with one stone. He'll fill the booking and get some competition out of the running at the same time!"

"Sure, I see that now. But where do I come in?"

"Here's the first match for that fire, Johnny!" Kay returned, reaching to the occasional table by the easy chair and picking up a pair of tickets. "You're taking Stella to a show tonight—and you're going to wind up at a night spot where you'll be noticed. And don't be surprised if Stella seems to be giving you the old works, either! That's only part of the act, sweet!"

"I can see why Adam took the chunk out of the apple if his girl friend was as good a schemer as mine is!" Johnny admitted. "Or are all women the same?" Kay grinned and kissed him.

"That's one of the things you'll probably never know, honey!" she smiled wisely. "You just do your stuff from now on and let me do the figuring!"

Whatever Kay and Stella had on the ball, Johnny was forced to admit to himself by the end of a week. It was entirely grade A! He hardly had a chance to see Kay, because he all tangled up in seeing the town in a big way with Stella. Joe Marlin called him into his office, all smiles.

"You were right, Johnny, old pal. I can see where I was a little hasty about Kay and Steele!" he ruefully declared. "I figured out a little act for you two lovebirds that ought to be a honey. How about it?" Johnny frowned.

"Where's the catch?"

No catch at all, Johnny. You and Kay get a contract for 40 weeks, starting next week. You could even

ARMY GETS PLANT'S THOUSANDTH PLANE

The one thousandth airplane contracted for under the national defense program is delivered to the army air corps by the Stearman Aircraft company of Wichita, Kan. Major Ray Harris, air corps representative at Wichita, points out the plane's number. Stearman is the first plant to deliver 1000 planes to the armed forces.

get married, you know—if you felt that way about Kay!"

"How about Steele?" Johnny wanted to know.

"Something will come up for a single pretty soon. By the way, you might congratulate me, Johnny. I got Stella to give me the go ahead signal on wedding bells this morning. Love's a grand feeling, isn't it?" Johnny had to grin himself.

"I'll tell you next year some time, Marlin. Kay and I got hitched at City Hall this morning." —Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

happiness in married life is uncertainty about what's to pay the bills. It's most unwise for a young couple to assume the responsibilities of marriage without taking up this question of income. As your fiancé has declined to follow up any of your leads on this most important subject, I hope you will bring it up without delay.

Perhaps you'd rather have your parents take it up with him—but modern girls usually prefer to know these details first-hand. Meanwhile, if you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope I will be glad to send you a budget for a family of four living on $100 a month, or a little less for a family of two.

Advise Change of Residence

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I've been going with a girl for three or four months. We've gone together to church, movies and dances. I've tried to do all I could for her, but for the past week she's acted as if she didn't want to have anything to do with me. I'm staying at their home now and have been for a couple of weeks. Would you advise me to change my boarding house, or try and make her interested in me?

F.H.

It looks as if this young lady has been seeing too much of you, and your only hope is that, in the words of the old quotation, "distance lends enchantment."

Better hunt up a new boarding place and see if absence doesn't make the heart grow fonder.

High-Handed Young Lady

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I've been going with a girl and think a great deal of her, but she won't go to a dance with me. I didn't see her for six weeks. Then she wrote and asked me to come back, but still she doesn't want to go "steady."

When I asked her to go to a dance, she said no, but agreed to allow me to come after her and take her home. She never asks me in a decent way, but just tells me to do something and doesn't even thank me.

Please tell me what I should do. I do think a lot of her, but don't want to be her doorman.

MICKEY.

I'm afraid you've been too humble to this girl, who sounds decidedly high-handed to me. If you weren't always at her beck and call and were seen around with some attractive girls she's probably change her tactics. Don't be a doorman.

People Bored Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:
For nearly a year I've been going steady with a young man and we were getting along splendidly. One evening we were invited to another girl's home to meet some of her friends, and while there my boy friend seemed to be very much bored with the people he met. On the way home I mentioned to him that I didn't think he acted as if he enjoyed himself. He became rather angry, didn't make any explanation about his behavior, and I haven't seen him since. We were both very fond of each other, and I can't imagine why he is acting this way. Can you give me any suggestions?

UNHAPPY.

A very important lesson for young people to learn is that they cannot expect friends of a certain group to accept friends of another group, no matter how much they may like them individually.

Possibly this young man didn't like the line these people took. Their remarks on general questions, politics, or discussion of personalities may have irritated him. Contrarywise, they may have highballed him and not found him socially agreeable.

When taking one friend out to spend the evening with another, try and find out beforehand if they are likely to be congenial. I suggest you call up this young man or write him a note asking him to call.

First, let's get clear as to quality. A&P Coffees are literally the pick of the plantations. We know, because they are selected right at the plantations by our own resident staff in South America... and A&P is the only grocer that keeps its own experts in the largest coffee producing districts of the southern continent. They're on hand to get first choice.

And right there, you find the clue to why such really fine coffee can sell for so little. From plantation through every step—testing, shipping, blending, roasting, packaging and selling—A&P Coffee is under our own control.

This not only assures top quality but also eliminates many extra handling charges and in-between profits that usually increase the cost of coffees. All savings A&P shares with you in the form of amazingly low prices.

There are three A&P Coffee blends to suit every taste; Eight O'Clock, mild and mellow; Red Circle, rich and full-bodied and Bokar, vigorous and winey. Try your favorite blend today.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is there any connection between war and a happier home life for everybody? Actually there is. Thoughtful people are already looking ahead to conditions in this country after the war is over. We'll all be busy, then, helping others who are exhausted and poor.

Where are we going to get the vitality and confidence we'll need to do this, if not in our own homes? Far-sighted people are telling us, therefore, that we must begin to plan for happier homes, lots more of them—homes that will really be a refuge. This means that matrons, young women, yes, even girls, will have to begin right away to learn how to create such homes and how to manage them.

The kind of wife that is going to be in demand is the practical one—the intelligent, warm-hearted, unselfish, child-loving, strengthening girl who has plenty of common sense and who has been taught to be domestic in the modern scientific way.

Must Be Practical
The girl who despises the practical side of life and is familiar with no other domestic utensil than the can opener will be passed over, they tell us, in the coming matrimonial deal. As will, likewise, the girl who regards marriage with selfish lightness and thinks of divorce as a smart sequel.

In other words, the girls who capture the best husbands will be those who have squarely faced the problems involving all women and who take marriage and homemaking seriously.

It's not surprising to hear that schools are being organized that will prepare girls to play their part in the Home of the Future. This means all girls including the many who have to work for a living and the smaller number who are supported by their parents.

What will such schools teach?
May Avoid Headache
According to Ruth Saffold de Treville, who is going to establish in New York a model school for girls, "general subjects" will be included. But no doubt we can take it for granted that the perpetual bug-bear, mathematics, won't be featured to the point of giving anybody a headache.

Instead, "every phase of a woman's part in the home" will be taught thoroughly. In this and in other such schools, girls will learn how to take care of the sick—and not just by guesswork. If you don't think that's important, you've never been confined to bed with no capable person to help. Hygiene and sanitation will also be in the curriculum.

Girls will learn what a square meal is and how to prepare it from the very beginning; they'll learn what children need and when. Principles of furnishing and decoration will be on the schedule and budgeting, which is perhaps the most important of all—with one exception.

For the human qualities of the woman at the head of the house will matter most—the qualities that will make her beloved. Let us hope these new schools can teach them.

Wants To Become Nurse

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Ever since I can remember I've wanted to be a trained nurse. But my mother disapproves and wants me to finish my college course, which really bores me to tears. I'm 19 years old. Every once in a while I win my mother over and she is on the point of giving in when some "wise" person spoils it all by telling my mother about some of the hardships.

Of course I wouldn't think of taking up training unless my mother approves, but I should like your views concerning my problem.

COLLEGE FRESHMAN

As you're still young, why don't you wait a year and get some college training. After that you may change your mind about being a nurse. There are many hardships connected with the profession, and a year of college will also be of great help to you.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend's family does not like me, so we planned to run off and get married and keep it a secret. But we've changed our minds and have decided to wait. We have been together for two years.

I found out not that she has been cheating—going out with other boys. I've told her it would mean our separation, but she continues to accept dates from others. I'm undecided whether I should wait for her, or give up the idea of marriage. She is 20 years old and I am 21.

JIM

Cheating is not a good foundation on which to build a happy marriage. Love, confidence and respect are all requisites for a life partnership. And do you mean by "cheating" something serious or just a little flirting with another boy? I find young people call both these things "cheating." As you're both very young and the girl's family doesn't approve of you, it would be better not to consider marrying just yet.

Realizes Her Mistake

Dear Miss Fairfax:
We saw each other every evening, and that must have been the reason we were getting on each other's nerves. It seemed impossible for us to spend an evening at home without arguing and it was the same when we went to the movies or to a dance.

When I couldn't stand it any longer I declared a moratorium and told my boy friend to stay away for six months and not try to get in touch with me. I didn't realize that I would be cutting off my nose to spite my face.

That was three months ago and the boy has done as I asked him. He hasn't called, written or phoned, and I'm heartsick and miserable. He has been seen out with another girl, and I'm about ready to swallow my pride and crawl.

Have you any suggestions as to the best way of making up? I need your advice badly, Miss Fairfax, and hope you'll send it along. I've neglected to tell you we were practically engaged before this happened.

FRANCES

I shan't rub it in by telling you what a mistake it is to indulge in a tantrum when it concerns someone about whom you really care. Why don't you write this young man a jolly little note and say, very frankly, that you've had enough of the moratorium and would like to see him again?

Should She Ask Him In?

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm in my third year high school, and we have many dances and parties, which I usually attend with a boy friend. I've often wondered whether I ought to ask these boys in when they escort me home. I usually say goodnight at the door, but my girl chum she asks her partner to come in a while. I would like you to tell me, please, who is correct.

DOT.

If it is late, say 12 or 1 o'clock, it's better form for a high school girl to bid her escort goodnight at the door. Sometimes a girl gives a supplementary party, and invites a group to come to her house for not chocolate or fruit punch, but this is not done in the case of a solitary young man. It would be well to get your mother's reaction to such an invitation.

Fiance's Finances

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Our wedding date has been set, and although we're to be married soon, my fiance has never mentioned the subject of money to me. We've known each other almost four years.

I feel as if I should know something about what we have to live on and how our budget is to be managed, before we marry. It's beyond me. Would it be wise for me to blunty put up the question as to our source of income, what we're to live on, whether we'll have a household budget, and if we are to try to save something?

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 27.—The State Labor Commissioner Charles J. F. Satter issued instructions today to his field deputies to offer mediation services in labor disputes in West Virginia, with particular reference to industries engaged in national defense work.

At the same time, Satter disclosed that such an offer had been made to both management and union officials at the Parkersburg Iron and Steel Company plant. The Parkersburg concern is understood to be working on material for army camps.

Earlier in the week, the state offered to mediate the strike at the Intervenor Stocking Company, Martinsburg, and received an acceptance from the union. The company has not replied pending word from its president.

Satter emphasized that the state has no power to enforce mediation and that it must be by invitation or agreement. The parties concerned must agree to abide by the decision.

Frostburg Police Trap Backfires; Bait and Prey Both Disappear

FROSTBURG, March 27.—The trap Frostburg police set last night for a couple of safe-crackers backfired. The safe the police used as bait disappeared, and so did the safe-crackers.

The story is this: Tuesday night or early Wednesday two or more daring thieves carried a 400-pound safe from St. Paul's Lutheran church and tried unsuccessfully to open it in the back-yard of the parsonage next door. They finally abandoned it, and Mrs. Walter V. Simon, wife of the pastor, discovered it yesterday afternoon.

Police hit upon the smart idea of leaving the safe where it was and keeping the matter as quiet as possible in the hope that the culprits might return and renew their efforts to open the safe or cart it away. Then, the police reasoned, they could catch them red-handed.

The idea was a good one. It worked—up to a certain point. The culprits did return, but the police weren't there to pounce on them.

Just what the hitch was could not be definitely learned. Apparently, the thieves called too early, since it was said in some quarters police hadn't planned to begin their vigil until midnight.

The Rev. Mr. Simon said, however, police called every hour during the evening. At 10 o'clock, the safe was still there.

On the next round at 11 o'clock, it was gone.

This morning, it was discovered on an ash pile in the yard of Dr. Adam Baer, whose residence is two doors removed from the parsonage on Main street.

A little embarrassed by the whole thing, police were somewhat reticent to discuss it. But officials of the church had the safe, containing about $25, moved to the Green Chevrolet garage until arrangements can be made to open it.

The robbers ruined it, chiseling off the combination dial and battering the hinges.

Somerset Classis To Be Dissolved In Church where It Was Organized

History of Reformed Church Group Begins and Ends at Frostburg

FROSTBURG, March 27.—The history of the Somerset Classis of the Reformed church, which had its beginning at Salem Reformed church here June 7, 1872, will terminate here Tuesday, April 15, when the final meeting of the organization will be held at Salem church.

Since the Reformed Church of the United States and the Evangelical Synod of North America united into the Evangelical and Reformed church, it has been found desirable to wind up the affairs of the Somerset Classis, a strictly Reformed body to be known as the Somerset Area which will include churches of both denominations.

A permanent record of the Somerset Classis is contained in a book, "Pastor and People of the Somerset Classis," which has just been published. It is dedicated to the memory of the Rev. Eugene P. Skyles, D. D., who was the chairman of the committee on publication until his death at Cumberland August 29, 1939.

Many copies of the book have been distributed here and in other sections of Western Maryland and Pennsylvania and are of particular interest to persons affiliated with the Reformed church. The Somerset Classis of the Reformed church embraced an area consisting of Somerset county, Pennsylvania, Allegany and Garrett counties, Maryland, and part of Bedford county, Pa.

The organization began in 1872 with thirty-three churches and 2,138 members and increased to forty-one churches and 3,866 members.

Frostburg Church Plans Holy Week Services

FROSTBURG, March 27.—With the near approach of Easter, St. Paul's Lutheran church is making preparations to celebrate the greatest festival of Christianity.

Special services will begin Palm Sunday morning, with the commemoration of the entry of the kingly Christ into Jerusalem and the reception of members by confirmation. The service of Wednesday evening of Holy Week will be marked by a reception of others who come by confession, letters of transfer and otherwise. The Wednesday evening service is also preparatory to the celebration of the Lord's Supper Holy Thursday evening.

The service of Easter Sunday morning will include special music, an Easter message and the baptism of infants.

No service will be held Monday evening of Holy Week, but the Ladies Guild of the church will hold its annual Lenten special meeting at which the Little Theater group of State Teachers college will present a religious play, and a group of public school singers, directed by Miss Doris Metzger, will sing.

The themes of the sermon messages for Palm Sunday, Holy Week and Easter are:

Palm Sunday morning, "But Is He King?"; Easter Sunday evening, "The Power of Receptivity"; Tuesday evening, "Which of the Two?"; Wednesday evening, "In Remembrance"; Thursday evening, The Lord's Supper; Easter morning, "The Risen Life"; and Easter

Volunteers Urge Fire Prevention Drive in County

Keyser Mayor Announces WPA Approval of $7,766 Street Project

KEYSER, W. Va., March 27.—President E. Wade Thomas, of the Mineral County Firemen's Association, today announced that the organization will sponsor a "Clean-Up Week" in the county, beginning April 21.

Thomas, who is also chief of the Keyser fire company, said the campaign would be conducted as a part of a nation-wide fire prevention program which is part of the seventy-fifth anniversary observance of the National Fire Underwriters.

The Association is made up of volunteer fire companies throughout Mineral county.

Street Project Approved

Mayor John C. Freeland today announced WPA approval of a $7,766.68 improvement project for G street here.

Improvements call for renewal of sidewalks and curbing, installation of "catch basins" and excavation and draining of the roadway, with a stone base and a bituminous surface to be laid.

Work is scheduled to begin after the completion of the resurfacing of Church street.

The city's share of the cost of the project is $2,273.82, matching a federal appropriation of $5,492.86.

Propaganda Rapped

The danger of propaganda was revealed in the sermon preached by the Rev. Father Luke, of St. Peter and Paul church, Cumberland, at the Lenten service last night at St. Patrick's Catholic church.

The propagandist of today is similar to the false prophets who tried to mislead the people during the time of Christ, Father Luke stated. To spread propaganda is to compromise truth, he said, and truth cannot be compromised.

Following the sermon Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given.

Economy Campaign Brings Savings To Taxpayers

Citizens in All Sections of State Work To Cut Expenditures

BALTIMORE, Md., March 27 — Taxpayers in Maryland have saved themselves to date two and one-half million dollars and secured an additional reduction in the State real estate tax as a result of the first state economy campaign ever attempted. Started as an emergency movement taxpayers are now permanently united to examine governmental costs and to enforce reductions in non-defense spending.

The State Budget Emergency Committee, formed a week after the 1942-43 state budget was first introduced in January, has awakened taxpayers in every corner of the state to the necessity of economy in governmental expenditures. Local committees were formed, mass meetings were held in nearly every county, tens of thousands of pamphlets were distributed, full page advertisements appeared in the papers, over four hundred co-operators were enlisted and every newspaper in the state co-operated in publishing news of the movement.

Taxpayers, determined to continue the economy movement locally, have formed permanent County Taxpayers' Associations in seventeen

LONG FLIGHT ENDED

Ivan Priscilla

Twelve and a half years after his escape, Ivan Priscilla, 49, finally has been returned to the London, O., prison farm to serve a possible maximum remaining term of seven years. In the interim, Priscilla once journeyed to his native Russia and served two terms in the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan. Ohio officials finally secured his extradition from Kansas after his latest federal sentence expired. He originally was sentenced to Ohio penitentiary from Cleveland for the forgery of a telegraph draft.

An association is forming in the City of Baltimore to carry on permanently the work started by the Citizens' Emergency Tax Control Committee.

The state spending program, including supplemental additions to the original, totaled over $111,000,000. To date reductions amounting to $2,500,000 have been effected following such a veritable tidal wave of protest for economy that the governor himself announced "Never before has the state witnessed such a concerted demand from taxpayers for reduced expenditures."

Ireland Thanks Citizens

An unusual feature of this campaign is that the taxpayers do not expect to save money for themselves out of the state economies since all know that re-armament taxes will take every cent saved and more. Their demands are based on the fact that re-armament cannot be stunted but that non-defense spending must be curtailed in order that people can pay the huge tax bills for national defense.

In a letter to co-operators thanking them, Curtis J. Ireland, chairman of the Citizens' State Budget Emergency Committee, said, "The success of your efforts for economy in non-defense expenditures proves that the taxpayers can put the brakes on the constantly increasing cost of state government. The aroused taxpayer realizing this will now insist on economies in his city and county government."

Shocking Story About Wild Life

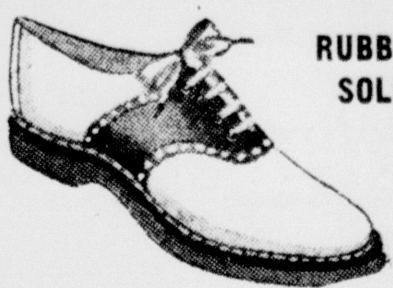

BATON, N. M., (AP) — At long last western ranchers think they have discovered a fence that will keep elk and deer out of haystacks.

It's an electric fence, similar to ones used by some cattlemen, that gives the elk a shock when it attempts to eat a free meal in the hay yard.

Deputy Game Warden Tom Holder, Jr., says the new fence was tried out at the Van Houten Cow Camp and the elk didn't like it. After a couple of shocks they stayed away from the haystacks.

It's World War III, Historian Opines

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., (AP) — The current war means death to the small European states, in the opinion of Dr. Thomas Ennis, former British soldier, war correspondent, and now associate professor of history at West Virginia University.

"I can no more foresee all results of the war than can anyone else," he said, "but I will say that it means the absolute end of the small states of Europe."

"This, in reality, is the third world war. The War of 1812 was certainly the first in that it affected every European country as well as the United States, and had far reaching effects in every other part of the globe."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mystery of the Navajo country currently engaging scientists is the tribe's "Cave of the Gods," said to be jealously guarded by elderly members of the race. Finding of an impressive shrine near Rough Rock, Ariz., by Dr. William A. Gardner of Columbia University, has been reported to the United States Travel bureau here.

The same agency quotes Glarwell Richardson, writer on southwestern subjects, as questioning the authenticity of the discovery and listing the cave as probably Hopi or Pueblo.

Richardson claims to be one of two white men to have been shown the Navajo cave, and expressed himself as astonished at its weird character.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

AS THE TWO unprepossessing individuals went on with their outrageous plans of plotting his death, carrying them out in fearful actions, Joel had to admit that it wasn't a dream. It was a nightmare of reality. And he was helpless, utterly unable to move. All he could do was wiggle his fingers and toes. And a heck of a lot of good that did.

Slowly but surely Ike and Zeb arranged the chair, the table, the gun and the string, as they remembered having seen them arranged in the movie.

Then when everything was fixed so that Joel was sitting with his own rifle aimed at his heart, all set to be shot the moment anyone opened the cabin door, Zeb discovered a weak point in their plan.

"We gotta nail that chair to the floor," he said.

"What for?" Ike asked.

"Effin' we don't," said Zeb, "he'll wiggle his way out of the gun, and won't get shot."

"And that," said Joel, "boiling with rage, 'would be just too bad!'"

"Hit Zeb would!" said Zeb.

He went hunting for a hammer and nails. He located them in the lean-to kitchen, and a few moments later the chair in which Joel sat was securely nailed to the floor.

"Nothin' less'n a cyclone or a earthquake could blow him er lose," was Ike's verdict.

"Waal," Zeb drawled, getting up from where he had been kneeling to do the hammering, "I reckon everything's all hunky-dory. . . Come on, Ike, we uns had better be er-hoo'd'n hit erway from here."

"Shore reckon yo' got the right idea, Zeb," said Ike. He started for the door leading to the narrow front porch.

"Not t'et'erway!" Zeb yelled. "Yo' want to shoot him erfo' we gits er-goin'?"

He backed away from the door, careful not to touch the string which was tied to the latch.

"Goshernighty!" he gasped. "I plum forgot!"

Zeb shook his head. "Sometimes, Ike," he said, "you uns is the feegit-fulest man whut is." He moved toward the kitchen door, glancing back at Joel. "I betchu whoever opens that thar front do' is goin' ter be plum surprised."

Ike chuckled. "Hit'll shore be presently the cabin was seeing another fight. Once again two men were rolling over its floor, banging this, banging that—and making a general wreck of things. Eve ran around in circles, trying to pull Joel off Zeb, and then trying to pull Zeb off Joel. It was when she saw that Joel was getting the worst of it that she caught up an iron poker from beside the hearth.

With the poker held high in her hand she went back to her circle running. She tried to find an opening. It took time, as the two men weren't still very long. Then, all at once, she saw the opening for which she had been looking. She brought the poker down with considerable force. The opening was no longer there—the opening through which she had hoped to hit Zeb over the head. She hit Joel instead.

He groaned and collapsed in a heap.

"Oh!" Eve cried, horrified. "I—I hit the wrong man!"

Zeb, seeing that Joel was no longer able to put up a fight, and now pretty well sobbed up, leaped to his feet.

"I—I reckon Ike and me'll ferget about that thar other three dollars," he said, panting for breath. "Get out of here!" Eve yelled, turning upon the mountain.

"Look what you made me do! Get out of here before I—I brain you!" She rushed at Zeb, flourishing the poker.

Zeb made for the door.

"You uns is shore er wildcat!" he said.

And then he disappeared into the night.

Eve dropped the poker and ran to Joel, who was lying still and silent upon the floor. She sank to her knees beside him, lifted his head, and cradled it against her breast.

"Joel!" she called. "Joel, look at me. . . Joel, DARLING!"

Joel opened his eyes slowly. He shook his head and groaned.

"Whew!" he said. "He must have hit me with the kitchen stove."

"You uns reckon them thar books will keep the gun steady?" he said.

"Shore hit will," said Zeb. "Hit won't even budge when the string tightens, and hit goes er-shootin'." He slid out quietly. "Come on, Ike. Time's er-flyin'."

Ike slid out also.

They were gone as quietly as they had come.

And Joel sat in the deepening gloom, silent, still, and not a little stunned. He stared at the rifle, watching the barrel.

He seemed to grow larger and larger, and regretting more and more the fact that he had himself loaded it only a few days before.

Agnes seemed to drag by, as Joel sat thinking, thinking—rather like the drowning man who sees his whole life pass before him within a few short moments. Bill, the little orphan, coming to live with him, Aunt Sallie and Uncle John. . . . The girls they had loved and fought over. The heartache he had so often suffered because in the end Bill always got the girls.

The hard work at the mill, trying to carry out the dreams Uncle John had talked over with him. That crazy business at the church at Ardendale. The hope that he might find peace and quiet up here in the mountains. And Eve. And Rita. And the childish fight with Bill. And now this. He wanted peace and quiet, had expected to find it, and now look at him! All trussed up like a stuffed pig—staring at a rifle—waiting, waiting.

The shadows moved across the floor. Darkness fell. A rat began nibbling in the wall. The insects that people the night began their twittering and singing.

And then the sound of a footfall. Joel stiffened, listening, every faculty alert.

There it was again! That sound of footsteps outside. And it was on the porch. It was coming toward the door. He held his breath for one dreadful moment.

"For God's sake, don't open that door!" he finally cried out. "Stop it! Get away!"

"But I want to come in!" came the reply.

"Get away from there—I tell you!" Go around back! And hurry!"

There was the sound of footsteps hurrying around the house. The outside door of the lean-to kitchen creaked open, slammed shut. More footsteps, and there stood Eve.

"Oh!" she cried. "What—happened?"

"This!" said Joel. "Some darned mountaineers went to the movies, and—this is the result." Then, as Eve started toward him, he said: "Careful of that gun! It might go off."

"Well, of all the crazy stunts!" Eve exclaimed. She went into action, as Joel directed, and unfastened the string that was fastened to the rifle's trigger. She then caught up a pen-knife from the table and cut the ropes. "There!" she said at last. "You're free."

Joel got to his feet somewhat stiffly. He grabbed up the rifle and hurried to the door.

"Where are you going?" Eve called.

"I'm going to find those two men," said Joel. "And when I do, I'll—"

"No, no, you mustn't!" Eve said. She ran to Joel, caught his arm.

"Listen, Eve," Joel said, "do you think I'm going to let those men get away with a stunt like that?"

"But—but—Joel, they may be in hiding just outside!" Eve wailed. "They might shoot first!"

Joel hesitated. "Maybe there's something in what you say," he remarked. "But still—"

It was at that moment that the front door opened, and Zeb came stumbling in.

"Why, you—you—" Joel gasped. "Coming back here like this! Stick up your hands!"

Zeb paid no attention. He looked at Eve.

"Two dollars ain't enough," he said. "Hit war runnin' er big risk, an' me and Ike's decided hit's worth five dollars each. We each wants three dollars more."

"What's he talking about, Eve?" Joel demanded, puzzled.

"Shet up, you!" said Zeb. "Me an' this here lady's got business to tend to. This here lady paid me an' Ike two dollars each ter do somethin' fer her, an'—"

"What did you do for her?"

"She giv' Ike an' me two dollars each fer to tie yo uns to that thar chair," said Zeb.

"Oh!" said Joel, staring at Eve. He sputtered, meaninglessly.

"Get away from there—I tell you!"

"Don't worry," said Joel. "If I'll please you any, I'll show Bill the bump on my head, and tell him all the details."

"Oh, Joel—please don't talk like that!" Eve begged. "You sound so hard. You don't sound a bit like the Joel I love."

Joel caught his breath sharply.

"What was that?" he asked.

"I said you didn't sound a bit like the Joel I love."

"Then I DID hear you," said Joel. "But you needn't pretend you love me, just because you almost brained me. That's not necessary."

"Joel Lee Randall," said Eve. "Look at me."

"I AM looking at you."

"Now, if you love me, say so."

"Of course I love you, you lovely little idiot," said Joel. "I've loved you since the day you ruined my collars, right up until now, when you hit me with a poker."

They began to laugh.

Then Joel went to Eve. He pulled her to her feet, held her close.

"Do you mean it, Eve?" he asked, his voice husky with emotion. "Do you really love me?"

"Yes, Joel, I really mean it," said Eve. "I think I began to fall in love with you the very day I fell among the collars."

"I—I just got mixed up when Bill came along, looking so much like Carey Watts."

"You know now it's not Bill you love?" said Joel.

Eve nodded. "I was in love with a memory, just like you said," she replied. "And when Bill made me promise to disassociate him from Carey, and then tell him whether or not I loved him, I found that it—"

it just didn't work out in Bill's favor. The moment I made myself disassociate the two men, I found myself thinking all the time of you, Joel."

"Darling!" said Joel, holding her close.

"And the other night when you kissed me," Eve went on, "I knew there was something about your kiss, Joel, that told me you were the man I loved. You put tenderness, sweetness and a world of love into that kiss—short as it was, and I knew then that Carey was gone forever, in memory as well as in fact, and that Bill didn't mean a thing in my young life."

"And yet you still went on trying to be his inspiration," Joel reminded her. "You even went so far as to plan this melodrama in which I played such a losing part."

"Yes, I know," said Eve. "But I wanted Bill to hurry up, get his material, and go away. . . . I—I thought you and I, Joel, could have so much better a time together if that terribly good-looking cousin of yours was out of the picture."

Strained Parent Relations

"The strained relations existing between you and your husband easily might cause your daughter to steal money," I wrote this mother. "Indeed, unhappy father-mother relationships can cause all sorts of misbehavior and personality problems in children. What's more, it is hard to see how children can grow up happily and acquire wholesome moral character in a home of constant strained relations between the parents. As I have often said, the most essential relationship in the home, even so far as the child is concerned, is the father-mother relationship. And let us remember that lying and stealing—deceit in short—practically always begins at home."

I have just read a most unusual autobiography of a bright college man serving sentence in a penitentiary. The most apparent contribution to this seemed to be the ceaseless strained relations between his distinguished father and mother. They neither loved him nor each other. It is easy to see how this boy was emotionally and morally unstable.

Solving Parent Problems

Q Suppose your child, say of 12, complained to you in confidence about treatment by the other parent in your absence.

A I should listen attentively but make no criticism of the other parent to this child. But I should discuss the matter frankly and calmly with the other parent privately.

Q What do you consider a good way to train the baby to avoid matches?

A Tell him just once he must not touch them. Immediately, every time he does, punish him. Allow no exceptions. When you are sure he should begin to use matches, limit his use of them to times when he is supervised.

Q What do you think of the practice by many a conscientious parent of putting the youth returning from a "date" on the "witness stand" to question him or her about all that happened?

A I consider this about the worst practice any parent can engage in, since it puts the parent in the position of a prosecuting attorney and the child a prisoner on trial, and it builds a wall between them.

City To Have Charge Of Planning Excavation For Proposed Airport

The preparation of plans for excavation work on the proposed Cumberland airport near Wiley Ford, W. Va., will be left in the hands of city officials it was decided Wednesday at a conference between city and state WPA officials in Baltimore.

The WPA has made some progress in preparing specifications but it was found the details did not dovetail with the plan being amplified by the city and it was decided to let the city do both jobs.

Under present plans it appears that WPA will contract for the excavation, the contractor to furnish equipment and operators. Common labor will be supplied by WPA. Specification work is expected to make some headway by next week.

The airport project hinges on whether a bill authorizing the sale of bonds for the job is passed in the State Senate prior to the adjournment of the legislature.

Crack Marksmen Of Infantry To Take to Range

Winners of Pershing Trophy To Defend Laurels; To Use Garands

Equipped with new Garand rifles, the One Hundred-fifteenth Infantry, which includes many Company G members, will take to the range Monday at Fort George G. Meade for marksmanship qualifications and to defend an enviable record.

The One Hundred-fifteenth Infantry, formerly the First Regiment of the Maryland National Guard, has the reputation of being one of the outstanding units in small arms qualifications in the United States. Consequently, when the soldiers take to the range Monday they will be defending the regiment's laurels.

Several years ago, when it was still known as the First Regiment, the One Hundred-fifteenth won the Pershing trophy presented by the National Guard Association of the United States for the best figure of merit for the eighty-three infantry regiments of the nation.

For the last several years the regiment, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, of Frederick, has stood above the first five national guard units in the country in small arms qualifications and one year ranked second nationally.

Hundred-fifteenth Infantry begins Hundred-fifteenth Infantry begins its qualifications firing with a prestige that it means to maintain.

Effort Put Forth Our efforts have been put forth this week, Col. Markey said, "on testing of the men and specialized group training to insure the qualification of every man who shoots next week. Our objective is to qualify every man with the rifle and still maintain our previous record in the United States."

There was a time, Col. Markey added, when failure to qualify might have meant discharge from the regiment but that no longer holds true.

Finishing touches are being put on the new range and it will be ready for use on Monday morning when it will be inaugurated to fire by the One Hundred-fifteenth, Infantry, completely equipped with the new Garand rifle and aiming at the qualification of each man.

Crack Marksmen Of Infantry To Take to Range

Winners of Pershing Trophy To Defend Laurels; To Use Garands

Equipped with new Garand rifles, the One Hundred-fifteenth Infantry, which includes many Company G members, will take to the range Monday at Fort George G. Meade for marksmanship qualifications and to defend an enviable record.

The One Hundred-fifteenth Infantry, formerly the First Regiment of the Maryland National Guard, has the reputation of being one of the outstanding units in small arms qualifications in the United States. Consequently, when the soldiers take to the range Monday they will be defending the regiment's laurels.

Several years ago, when it was still known as the First Regiment, the One Hundred-fifteenth won the Pershing trophy presented by the National Guard Association of the United States for the best figure of merit for the eighty-three infantry regiments of the nation.

For the last several years the regiment, commanded by Col. D. John Markey, of Frederick, has stood above the first five national guard units in the country in small arms qualifications and one year ranked second nationally.

Hundred-fifteenth Infantry begins Hundred-fifteenth Infantry begins its qualifications firing with a prestige that it means to maintain.

Effort Put Forth Our efforts have been put forth this week, Col. Markey said, "on testing of the men and specialized group training to insure the qualification of every man who shoots next week. Our objective is to qualify every man with the rifle and still maintain our previous record in the United States."

There was a time, Col. Markey added, when failure to qualify might have meant discharge from the regiment but that no longer holds true.

"Ladies from Hell" Again on War Duty

By J. NORMAN LODGE

LONDON, March 27 (AP)—Depleted in the British retreat from France last June, the famed Scottish Black Watch has been reformed and again is on war duty as a regiment of the Fifty-first Highlanders division.

The black-tartaned "Ladies from Hell" for more than 200 years have helped to make British history, wherever Britons have fought, there usually has been at least one battalion of the hairy-legged Highlanders.

Where they will fight they don't know, but as an officer said, "Right it'll be, laddie, with such a bonnie lass as queen." (Queen Elizabeth is Scottish.)

There is the only regiment of the British army allowed to wear the red hackle of courage. The hackle—tuft of red feathers that dangles from the tam-o-shanter—was won against the French in 1795. The red hackle was made their official decoration by a war office memorandum in 1922.

Reds Drop Second Straight to New York

Failure To Hit In Pinches Cost Champs Victory

Giants Turn Back Cincinnati 6 to 3; Three Home Runs Hit

MIAMI, Fla., March 27 (AP)—Failure to hit when it counted cost the Cincinnati Reds another ball game today, with King Carl Hubbell, rookie Ace Adams, and the New York Giants elbowing them aside, 6 to 3.

The Reds left eleven men on the bases and Jimmy Riddle ended the game by striking out with the bases loaded.

A good wind kept the home run quota down in the little park, with Bobby Mattick of the Reds and Nick Witting and Frank Demaree of the Giants getting the only four-basers of the day.

Fireman Joe Beggs, who, it seemed, couldn't lose a game in relief last year, was charged with the defeat.

Bears Defeat Phils

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 27 (AP)—The Philadelphia Nationals took a 6 to 3 trouncing today from Newark of the International League.

The Bears' starting twirler, Tommy Byrne, a graduate last June from Wake Forest college, held the Phils to three meagre hits and one run in his five innings on the mound.

Brown Wallop Toledo

KARLINGTON, Tex., March 27 (AP)—The St. Louis Browns pounded the Toledo Mudhens of the American Association for seven runs in the last inning today—but it was just so much sauce on the Browns' cake.

They entered the ninth with a one-run lead and their baserunning marathon made the final score, 11 to 3.

Cubans Down Red Sox

HAVANA, Cuba, March 27 (AP)—A picked squad of Cuban All-Stars pinned an unexpected 2-1 defeat on the Boston Red Sox today with Juan Decal limiting the heavy-hitting American Leaguers to five scattered hits in as many innings.

Dahlgren Is Hero

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 27 (AP)—First baseman Babe Dahlgren was the batting hero once again today as the Boston Bees evened their exhibition game standing with the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association with a 7-6 ten-inning victory.

Babe belted a 400-foot drive over the distant center field fence with two aboard in the sixth to put the trailing Bees one run ahead.

Cubs Finally Win

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 27 (AP)—Chicago's Cubs, who lost to their Los Angeles Farm club yesterday by a single run, had to go 11 innings today to win, 10 to 8, and even the two game series.

Athletics Lose

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., March 27 (AP)—The Athletics opened a four-day stand here today by dropping a 7 to 4 decision to their hosts, the San Francisco Seals, before 2,500 spectators.

Anderson Hits Homer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 27 (AP)—Rookie Alf Anderson from Atlanta, planted his picture more firmly in the mind of Manager Frankie Frisch today by clouting a ninth-inning home run with two mates on base to give Pittsburgh's Pirates a 6 to 5 victory over the Chicago Americans.

Anderson, flashy looking shortstop described some time ago by Frisch as a fellow "who grows on you by his work" was reported earlier in the day as tabbed for a bit more Minor League seasoning.

Greenberg Hits 2 Homers

LAKEVIEW, Fla., March 27 (AP)—Hank Greenberg blasted two home runs and Rudy York one today to give the Detroit Tigers a 10 to 9 exhibition victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers second stringers.

The margin was Greenberg's second round-tripper, off Steve Rachunok in the ninth inning. His other, and York's were hit off Luke Hamlin in the second stanza.

Buck Newsom started on the mound for Detroit and was hampered for seven hits and six runs in five innings.

Spring training time brings memories to this man, one of baseball's "greats" of the past. Now an inmate of a Veterans' hospital in New York, Grover Cleveland Alexander, former big league pitcher, reminisces on the old days. Alexander, who won 373 games in his big league career, pitched for the Phils, Cubs and Cardinals in the National league, retiring in 1930. He is 54 years old now.

Dodger Manager's Life Isn't A Lot of Things

LAKEVIEW, Fla., March 27 (AP)—There is more than you think to managing a baseball club. Especially the Brooklyn Baseball Club. We have been scrutinizing Leo Ernest Durocher, the rubicund pilot of the Dodgers, and we find that this unfortunate fellow has hardly a moment he can call his own.

Success isn't everything. Leo was probably happier in his youth, as a humble pool shark, than he is today.

First, there are the usual managerial chores. Then there are interviews, of which Durocher gives fifty-six per day (thirty-four general and twenty-two exclusive). Then there are talking lessons. Durocher is teaching Pee-wee Reese, his young shortstop, to talk, a situation which Leo is the world's foremost expert next to his employer, L. Stanford MacPhail.

Finally, there is the problem of keeping out of the way of this same MacPhail, who wants Durocher to play baseball.

Wants To Be Bench Genius
Durocher does not wish to play baseball. He hopes to become a bench genius, on the order of John J. McGraw and Connie Mack. He and MacPhail agree on every point except this one. MacPhail, a coarse, stubborn, unimaginative character, fails to realize that Durocher's genius will expand and flourish best on a pine plank. He wants the great thinker to go out there in the hot sun and play shortstop. The other day, when we saw him, Durocher was having his hands full, eluding L. S. MacPhail and teaching young Reese to talk.

"We gotta have pepper; we gotta have some holler; we gotta have the old gazimbo out there. Pee-wee!" yelled Leo. "Y'low don't say nothing. Don't you know no words?"

"Well, yes," began Reese, a quiet youth by nature.

"What words do you know? Any English?" inquired his manager.

"I don't go for it much myself, but you're probably too young to master the old hoksus. The old double talk. Now, if I was you—"

At this point MacPhail hove into view, and Durocher ducked hastily behind the dugout.

"If I'm not careful, he'll have me playing shortstop instead of Reese," muttered Leo. "And just when I'm about to make a great talker out of the kid."

The coast cleared, and Durocher emerged to continue his lesson. "I want you to be popping off out there, Pee-wee," he said sternly. "I want to hear the old zing. Give me a little of this and a little of

Cresaplow Ladies Win Over Diamond

All-star ladies' teams representing the Diamond and the Silver Lanes of Cresaplow met on the latter's alleys with the home club scoring an easy 236-pin victory. Pacing the Silver Lanes was J. McGann with 155-400 and L. Leps with 369. Hipsley sparked the Diamond with 369. The scores:

that. The pigis on the poigis. All of the time. The old chatter. The old whatzis. I mean the old—"

What A Question!

A heavy hand settled upon Durocher's shoulder. He turned to behold the chiseled countenance of Leland S. MacPhail.

"Are you gonna play some shortstop today, Leo?" asked the chief-tain.

"Who, me?" said Durocher, shocked. "You mean now, after I've just given young Pee-wee here a lesson on how to pop off? I want to hear him talk. I want to hear him holler out there. I want to test him."

"You mean you think we need a talking shortstop?" said MacPhail.

"You got it in one, Larry," said Leo, slapping his boss on the back. "Now you got the idea. Now you see what I mean. Now you're cooking with gas."

"Okay," said L. S. MacPhail. "That's what I think, too. We need a talking shortstop. You may not be able to hit, but you can certainly talk."

"I can talk a little," he admitted. "I mean, now and then I make some noise. I mean, I don't say a hell of a lot. 'I'm more the bashful type.' I mean—now listen, Larry. Wait a minute, Larry. Don't go away, Larry. You don't understand, Larry. Listen, Larry—"

When I last saw Durocher, he was playing shortstop, out there in the hot sun. A Brooklyn Manager's life is no bed of roses. I mean it's no cinch. I mean it ain't easy. I mean it's tough.

Whirlaway Is Sure To Run in Kentucky Derby

Trainer Ben Jones Is Not Dismayed at Poor Winter Showing

MIAMI, Fla., March 27 (AP)—Trainer Ben Jones, far from dismayed by Whirlaway's poor showing this winter, said today the Warren Wright colt definitely would run in the Kentucky Derby, with three or more tuneup races before then.

Whirlaway, champion juvenile of 1940 and the early derby winter-book favorite, won his three-year-old debut, finished third in his second start and was scratched from the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes after developing a leg ailment.

He again ran third in the Miami Spring Purse at Tropical Park last Saturday, and has been entered in another race tomorrow.

Jones is confident Whirlaway's trouble has been eliminated. "He appears sound, so far as I can determine," the trainer asserted. "Steady work will bring out any defects that may remain, I believe."

"We were not discouraged nor were we worried by his defeat. The race will do him a lot of good, as will these three or four additional races we plan for him. I feel that by derby time—and we're sending him into the derby—he will be right to make a bid for the victory."

One of the tuneups, Jones said, would be in the Bluegram Stakes at Keeneland, where the colt will be shipped April 1.

Aircorps Increase Lead in Kelly Loop

The Aircorps extended their lead and the Camel Backs tied the Kant Slips for second place in Kelly-Springfield League pin-smashing this week at Club Recreation.

The Aircorps knocked off the Commercial three times to add two more games to their margin. The Kant Slips were upset twice by the Camel Backs. The Buckeyes took a pair from the Kellys and the Sure Slips shut out the Registereds.

Sets of 500 or better were plentiful with Rotundo of the Buckeyes taking individual honors with 200-553. Trail hit 521 for the Kellys. Flake 27-015 for the Camel Backs. Straw 502 for the Sure Slips and Sulser 500 for the Registereds. Other team leaders were Bible, Commercial 403; Boden, Aircorps, 488 and Clapper, Kant Slips, 408. The scores:

The Joe Louis Gamble

When anyone mentions "gamble" in connection with the various Joe Louis ring enterprises, the responding answer is likely to be in the nature of a hoarse guffaw. The Bomber is usually a 1-10 shot, or even shorter, which leans more in the sure direction than any gamble.

Yet the gamble is still there in this uncertain world.

The Louis crown is worth around $3,000,000—as long as Louis wears it. In his last start against Abe Simon in the Detroit show the champion raked in a trifle under $20,000. So he was gambling a $3,000,000 title against $20,000 collection, with the odds at 1-150, a price few would care to offer in any form of competition.

No one rated Simon with a chance to whip Louis. But in taking numerous whacks and smashes at Abe's granite chin, suppose Louis had cracked one or both paws?

This can happen to any puncher at any given moment. Both Dempsey and Louis carried iron first into action, where more than a few good lighters have been harried or wrecked by brittle hands.

When you are leveling against a Simon jaw, hooked to 255 pounds of human flesh and bone, only a pair of tough hands can stand the test.

Fighting Hands
Jim Corbett once told me that in his earlier days he was a good puncher.

"I decided to go out for boxing," he said, "for two reasons. One was the speed I had in my legs. The other was to save my hands."

Gene Tunney had early hand trouble, one of the reasons he concentrated on boxing in place of the knockout wallop.

In his second start against Jim Jeffries, Bob Fitzsimmons might have won if he hadn't smashed both hands on Jeffries' jawbone. They were shattered down to the lower knuckles.

More than a few rather important fights have been lost by broken hands.

The Double Risk

Louis is one of the few fighters on record who can punch equally hard with both hands. This explains more than 80 per cent of his effectiveness. If either fin should crack up his assaulting powers would be cut down heavily.

Both To Gibbons and Gene

Tunney knew the way to keep on guard against Dempsey's blasting left hook. Jack's right was nothing like the Louis right.

So when Louis is swinging away with any two-handed attack he is always taking a double risk against a concrete head or cement chin. He confessed to a pair of sore hands after the Simon party.

Another Angle
It is also a matter of judgment as to how long anyone can keep at razored work as often as the Bomber does. No other heavy-weight champion ever took any such gamble.

Fortunately for Louis, he hasn't the type of imagination that keeps him keyed up.

But long training periods can remove a big part of the keenness that follows long resting spans. There is a touch of drudgery to training that most fighters either dread or dislike intensely. Mickey Walker and Benny Leonard, two of the best, were always below par in their training stuff.

The wonder is that Louis, with all the cash he has piled up, is still willing to face the grind. He will have practically no recess from now until late September—this campaign on top of 15 defensive stands.

Part of the Answer
It is easy to understand Mike Jacobs' big rush. The answer is the draft.

Both Louis and Billy Conn are out so many strides away, and the odds against their going to an army camp will be considerably lower before the summer is over. Draft numbers that were once in the treblets have now fallen to the lower limbs. And they are falling faster every week.

No one knows this better than Mike and those handling the destinies of most of the leading challengers.

Lash To Retire
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., March 27 (AP)—Don Lash, for seven years one of the nation's top distance runners, has retired from competition to give all his time to his vocation—teaching motorists that highways aren't race tracks.

The Indiana State policeman disclosed his decision informally while delivering a safety lecture yesterday to a service club at Elkhart, Ind. Friends of the trooper here sought corroboration from his wife.

"Yes," she said, "Don is ending his long track career, but he plans to withdraw quietly."

Real American
Heber Hampton Newsome, big right-hand pitcher bought from San Diego by the Red Sox, says he must be an American as his ancestors settled in North Carolina back in the eighteenth century. Heber, whose nickname is "Dick," is a refugee from the Cardinal chain, having pitched for eight different teams controlled by the Cards since he quit Wake Forest College in 1931.

On Weight Basis
The Washington roster shows only five players weighing 190 pounds or more and only one who tips the scales at more than 200 pounds. That one is Pitcher Arnold Anderson. As a contrast, the Yankees have five 200-pounders and eight others who top the 190 mark. Detroit has just as many 200-pound athletes but only six others over the 190-pound notch.

Long-Time Winner
Willie Hoppe, world three-cushion billiard titleholder, has been winning billiard championships more than 30 years.

For no one—and beyond early summer the shore line of all sport is thick with fogs and gathering mists. As the matter now stands Jacobs has arranged five starts for Louis in the next six months—April, May, June, July and September. This will leave Louis facing his twenty-first defense of the main crown—if he slips safely through them all—if there is someone around for him to fight.

Only Conn and Nova (if Nova whips Baer) figure to give him any trouble, unless Abe Simon can reinforce the stockade just above his neck or discover something that looks like a punch. Simon's best chance is to lead with his chin and take a chance on cracking one or both of the champion's hands.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

TAMPA, Fla., March 27 (The Special News Service)—Lefty Gomez just pitches with one hand, but there is another Gomez down here who pitches with two hands, and so far they've been having trouble lining up anybody who can catch him for more than a couple of innings.

His name is Tommy Gomez, and he's a heavyweight prizefighter whom the good citizens of Tampa suspect might some day chase Joe Louis clear back to Alabama.

He's just twenty years old, and right now is in Uncle Sam's army at Camp Blanding. He's only been fighting eighteen months, and he makes more errors in there, than a ten-thumbed shortstop.

But he can punch. He's greener than spinach, and most of his fights have been so brief and against such 10-20-30 competition that nobody knows what he could do against a really good guy, or how high he could bounce if clipped.

But he can punch. Jumping jellybeans, he can punch! He can punch with the right hand and he can punch with the left hand. He can tear a head off with a long overhand right, or drill holes with six-inch thunderbolts.

We were pretty well softened up by the sales talks of the natives before we ever saw this two-fisted torpedo. If you mentioned that the Cincinnati Reds looked pretty good, you'd get something like this:

"Yes, but have you seen Tommy Gomez?"

We learned, among other things, that five years ago he was winning merit badges as a boy scout; that his first public appearance was as a professional in September, 1935; that he formerly bellhopped in local hotels; he has won twenty-three of his twenty-nine fights by knockouts; that his only defeat came when he weighed less than 160 pounds, and that he knocked out his conqueror, Buddy Rose, in the first round of a return match; that he has ballooned from 153 pounds to 182 in the last eighteen months, and that he gave Maynard Daniels a terrific lacing and knocked out Harold Hardin for the first time in his career.

We met him one night, socially, of course. He's a clean-cut, pleasant, intelligent and serious lad. His fists betray his power. They look like cat-couplers.

He explained his fighting style, told of his hopes and dreams. He didn't boast. On the contrary, he appreciates his shortcomings, as well as do his severest critics.

We saw him in action the other night. His opponent was a fatherly, pale, pretty boy named Ernie Petratti who didn't look like much of a fighter, yet wasn't afraid and he had two arms, two legs and the usual number of eyes.

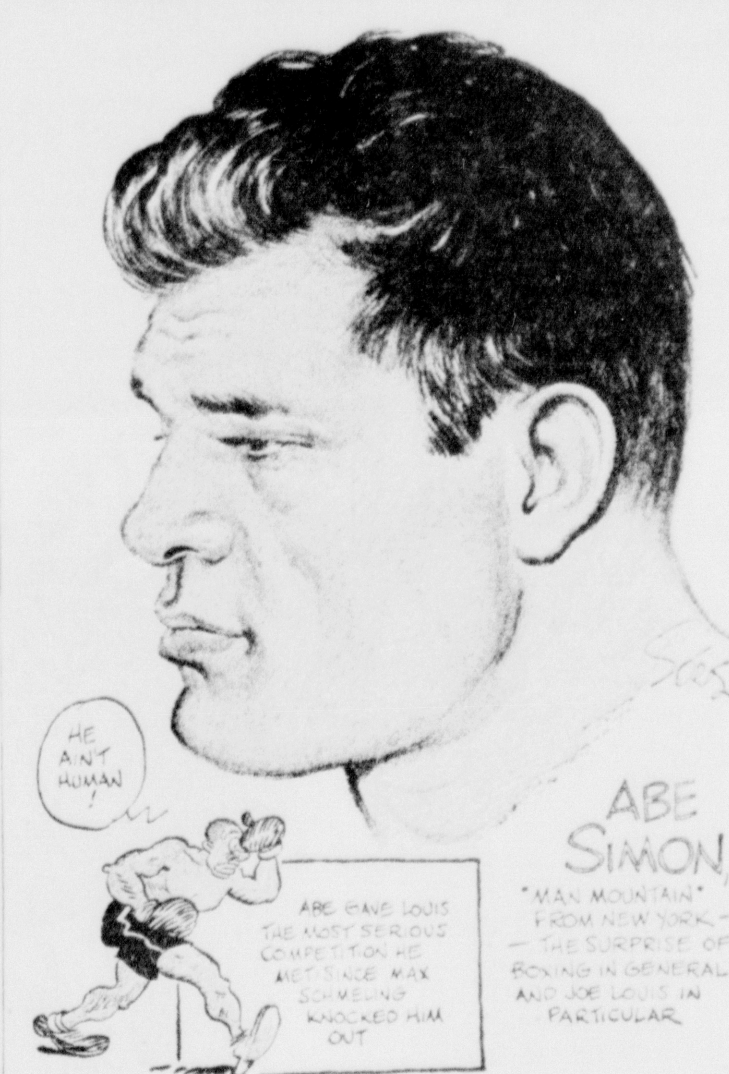

Gomez took off his crimson bathrobe to show a superb physique. At the bell he put his hands up alongside his head, hunched his shoulders and advanced with a weaving style. There was a brief flurry and a noise like a firecracker in a rain barrel. Petratti was down for nine. It was a left hook.

In the second round, Gomez unfolded that overhand right. Petratti bounced a couple of times and was quite still as they carried him to his corner. Gomez apologized for his fine showing. He had been ill for a month, and his timing was off, he said.

Gomez is managed by Joe Leto. The Leto boys grew up in a gymnasium. One brother, Tony, was a good featherweight a dozen years ago. Another, Johnny, is a ranking welter now. Still another, Pete, joined the army just to be near Gomez and train him. Joe Leto has no written contract with Gomez, but Gomez says he is going to stick to him no matter what happens.

The kid may go far. So many fine-looking bubbles burst before they touch the ceiling. But he's a clean-living, straight-thinking lad and he can punch.

Pauline Betz Is Net Titlist

BROOKLINE, Mass., March 27 (AP)—Pauline Betz of Los Angeles won the women's national indoor tennis championship today by defeating Dorothy May Bundy in the final round, 6-1, 10-12, 6-2.

Miss Betz won the first set with little effort, but her opponent rallied in the second and proved trouble. Some superior playing by the new holder of the title vacated by Alice Marble, left little room for doubting the outcome of the third, deciding clash, however.

Olsen and Olsen

The Chicago Cubs have a pair of Olsens on their squad roster this year, but they're no relation. Vern, a pitcher, was a southpaw whiz last summer as a rookie. Barney, an outfielder, came up this spring from Tulsa, where he was on option. Vern is from Oregon, Barney from Massachusetts.

Pitchers Weakening
It would seem that home-run-hitting pitchers are weakening. The 1940 National League records show that not one pitcher hit more than one homer last year. Hal Schumacher, with six, holds the league record.

The smallest church in the world is said to be Monte Casino church, Covington, Ky., which accommodates only three persons, including the priest.

There's a gag currently making the Hollywood rounds that illustrates clearly that Preston Sturges is now a full-fledged member of the small, select circle of Plindom's "great directors."

A noted actor is said to have remarked to an influential group of Hollywoodians, "I hear that, for this next Sturges picture, critics have agreed to mention the actors." This was not said maliciously, either, for the same actor added that he was going to make every effort to appear in one of the writer-director's near-future pictures.

Sturges' new film, "The Lady Eve," which opens today at the Strand theater, stars Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda. Because of his prestige and his popular appeal, Sturges at present is one of the very few film makers who gets as much advertising billing as his stars. It is rare that picture stars don't have most of the billing to themselves.

London's 'Sea Wolf' Coming to Liberty

Jack London cast "The Sea Wolf" for Warner Brothers.

Steve Trilling, casting director for Warner Brothers, admits that he had little to do with it. The characters practically cast themselves from the specifications laid down by London when he wrote "The Sea Wolf" in 1904, says Trilling. "The Sea Wolf" opens tomorrow at the Liberty theater.

Edward G. Robinson, as Wolf Larsen; John Garfield as Leach; Alexander Knox as Van Weyden; and Ida Lupino as Ruth Webster all came together many years later to fit particular niches in the picture.

Even the boss rigger on the lot, Big Louis Madsen, who trims "The Ghost" Larsen's ship, is a character out of a London novel. Big Louis was boatswain on the "Di-figio," on which London sailed around "the Horn."

Patsy Kelly Featured In Maryland Film

Patsy Kelly is making her first reappearance in films, after a year's absence in New York, in Hal Roach's "Road Show," at the Maryland theater.

Roach directed the Eric Hatch novel, with a cast also featuring Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Charles Butterworth and George E. Stone.

Higgins Family Returns To Embassy Theater

Republic's irrepressible Higgins family is featured again in "Petticoat Politics," which opens today at the Embassy theater.

Roscoe Karns and Ruth Donnelly as Joe and Lil Higgins, might well be Mr. and Mrs. Joe Public, and

TERROR AFLOAT

Ida Lupino and Edward G. Robinson are shown in a scene from Jack London's immortal story of floating terror, "The Sea Wolf," which opens tomorrow at the Liberty theater. John Garfield is starred with them.

HOLLYWOOD STARLETS

Two of the Hollywood starlets, who will appear in the stage show coming to the Maryland theater Monday and Tuesday. Thirty-five entertainers, including many familiar faces from stage, films and radio comprise the cast.

their children, played by George Ernest and Lois Ranson, have the same gay, harum-scarum, lovable traits of any high school kids their age, the country over.

Particularly true to life is Grandpa, played by Spencer Charters. Polly Moran, a favorite since the early Mack Sennett days, portrays the Widow Jones.

The associate feature stars the "Three Musketeers" in "The Trail Blazers."

Jane Withers Film, Western At Garden

A Jane Withers picture and a Bill Elliott Western comprise the double feature at the Garden today.

"Youth Will Be Served" is the title of the Withers film. Included in the cast are Jane Darwell, Joe Brown Jr. and Tully Marshall.

Also on the Garden program is "Wildcat of Tucson," starring Bill Elliott.

BEWILDERED

Henry Fonda finds his romance with Barbara Stanwyck hectic and hilarious in the new Paramount comedy, "The Lady Eve," opening today at the Strand theater. It's a new kind of love he discovers.

Co-Ed Quirks

The University of Santo Thomas at Manila, Philippines, is the oldest university under the American flag. It was founded by Spanish Dominican friars in 1611.

Japanese Draft Goes after Colonists

PEIPING (AP) — The Japanese consular police in China are tightening up on Japanese youths failing to register for military service. No postponement of the date fixed for physical examination is being allowed.

It is reasonable for Japanese living in America or Europe to ask for postponement, but those in China have no valid excuse, says a consular police statement.

Cumberland Police Bill Is Passed Unanimously By the Maryland Senate

Senator Kimble Amends Pay Increase Measure, Reducing Figures from $16,000 to $5,200

A sharply-amended bill calling for pay increases for members of the Cumberland Police Department, introduced by Senator Kimble, was passed by the Maryland Senate yesterday.

The bill (No. 301), by Senator Robert B. Kimble (R-Allegany), was amended to make reductions recommended by the mayor and city council. It passed the Senate unanimously.

The amendments cut salaries of the chief of police from $250 a month to $210, the assistant chief from $190 to $185, the lieutenant from $145 to $140, sergeant from $135 to $130, and patrolmen from $125 to $120. The bill also eliminated original provisions for graduated raises in following years. The original bill called for additional compensation as follows:

After serving five years, the monthly compensation shall be increased by one and one-half per cent of the salary of his grade or position; after ten years by three per cent; after fifteen years by five per cent; after twenty years by six per cent; after thirty years by seven and one-half per cent of the salary of his grade or position.

Compensation for Injuries
Also eliminated was a section to supply uniforms and overcoats to members of the force at half cost, other amendments cut the leave of absence from thirty to fifteen days but added a section for compensation from absence from duty due to injuries.

Delegate Charles M. See last night announced that Senate Bill 321, relating to the sale of light beer, beer, wine and liquor license, Class A (off sale), and permitting the holders of such license to sell alcoholic beverages at retail in quantities of less than one pint, was up for third reading in the House and stood a good chance of being passed in the lower House. The measure would affect about six license holders in Cumberland, See stated.

Pass Both Houses
Two Allegany county bills that have passed both houses and are now awaiting the signature of the governor are House Bill 160, which eliminates the property qualifications of the mayor and councilmen of Cumberland, and Joint Resolution No. 8, requesting the United States Congress and the Department of the Interior to convey certain federally-owned land in the City of Cumberland to the mayor and city council of Cumberland. The property formerly was owned by the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, within the City of Cumberland and will be used for public purposes, according to the provisions of the measure.

Garie L. Miller Is Arrested After Car Hits Parked Machine

Garie L. Miller, 13½ Putnam Place, was arrested last night on Maryland avenue by Officers C. J. Stouffer and W. P. Crabtree after his car struck a machine parked in the 900-block.

Miller was lodged in jail on charges of violating two state motor laws. He is scheduled to be given a hearing today in trial magistrates court.

New Stocking Plan Inaugurated To Give Trout a "Better Break"

Year-a-Round Program Gives Fish Chance To Become Acclimated

A system of stocking trout streams whereby the fish is given a "better break" was explained yesterday by Pulcher P. Smith, member of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, in reply to numerous inquiries on the subject.

Formerly, streams were stocked just before the opening of the fishing season, Smith said. Since the trout season has been opening on April 1 there has never been much open weather prior to the opening date, particularly in Garrett county.

Kimble Bill Would Make Laundries Pay For Lost Articles

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 27 (AP)—Six missing senatorial shirts put a bill through the legislative mangle today, but only after a squeeze like a shrunken collar.

The Senate killed, reconsidered, and then passed a measure by Senator Robert B. Kimble (R-Allegany) to make laundries responsible for a lost article up to 20 times the price for laundering the article.

Urging passage, Kimble explained he lost six shirts at a Baltimore laundry, and it "took three months of effort to get satisfaction." He figured "twenty times the eleven-cents cost of cleaning a shirt would pay for $2 shirts."

The bill lost 14-11, but the vote was reconsidered, and passed 16-12—after Senator John B. Funk (D-Frederick) voted "no" because "some members may wear shirts costing more than $2."

Four Youths Are Held for Action Of Grand Jury

Bond Set at $1,500 Each on Breaking and Entering Charges

Four North Cumberland youths were ordered held under $1,500 bond each to await action of the grand jury when arraigned yesterday in trial magistrates court on charges of breaking and entering a number of homes and business places here in recent weeks.

The youths, all past 16 years of age, gave their names as John Adams, 209 Hay street; Irvin Pactow, 307 North Centre street; Girdwood Shaffer, 740 North Mechanic street, and Glenn Webb, 220 North Centre street.

All four were committed to the county jail in default of bond, but Webb's release was obtained later. Traced by police through a footprint left at a looted service station, one of the youths was arrested Wednesday morning. The other arrests followed.

Police said the youths admitted thefts at the home of Ralph R. Webster, 639 Sedgwick street, principal of Allegany high school, and William A. Gunter, 201 Washington street, local attorney. They also admitted stealing five bicycles, two of which were found hidden under a trestle near North Centre street, the other three having been thrown into the river and Willis Creek, officers added.

The Dillinger and Light service stations in North Cumberland and the Cumberland Box Company Office in South Cumberland were among the places entered by the boys, according to police.

See Was Not Sponsor Of Liquor Bill 679

An item in yesterday's issue of the News which stated that Charles M. See, chairman of the Allegany county delegation, J. Milton Dick and Lester B. Reed had introduced House Bill 679 relating to the alcoholic beverage laws and authorizing the appointment of a Liquor Control Board, is erroneous, because of the fact that See had no interest whatsoever in the bill. Jonathan Sleeman, Dick and Reed sponsored the bill which was introduced in the lower House. The News regrets the error.

Inaugurate New System

"Those who could not or did not care to go out the first few days, some preferring to fish during warmer weather, have found that there have been no trout left for them to catch."

"Therefore, we are inaugurating a new system of scattering or stocking trout throughout as many months of the year as possible. We have purchased a new truck for Bear creek which we plan to use the year around. The truck has an aeration unit making it possible to handle fish during hot weather on long trips. Previously, our

Chest Workers Raise 28 Per Cent Of Total Quota

Clock on Y.M.C.A. Points To $16,311 After First Two Days

The hand on the twelve-foot clock on the Central YMCA pointed to $16,311 following the second report luncheon yesterday in the Community Chest campaign. With this year's goal of $56,605.90, this means that in the first two days of the campaign twenty-eight percent of the total has been subscribed.

The women's section, of which Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum is chairman and Mrs. William M. Somerville, associate chairman, has reported forty-two percent of the goal assigned the women, already subscribed. Ralph G. James, chairman of the national firms section, reported at yesterday's meeting that thirty-four per cent of the goal had been reached. Advanced gifts and the classified sections followed.

Mrs. Anna McCleary's division in the women's section is the only division so far in the campaign which has passed the fifty per cent mark in reaching its goal.

Report Luncheon Today
The third report luncheon will be held today at 12 noon at the Central YMCA. All workers are urged to report promptly to the auditors so that the bureau may close at 12:15 p. m. and none of the workers will be omitted. The auditor's desk is open at 11:30 a. m.

Gold star awards for the second day of the campaign were announced yesterday. In making the announcement, Dr. Frank M. Wilson, chairman for the fifteenth Community Chest drive, pointed out that the award is not necessarily given to firms in which every member subscribes. "That isn't a equitable practice, as often it works hardships on the subscribers. Instead, the stars are given to firms which have met the goal suggested by section leaders and captains after studying the number of employees and salary level. This way, those in the firms who are better able to donate to the chest can make up for the occasional one who can't afford it."

NAVY MAN PROMOTED—George Carroll, signalman first class, who opened the local Navy recruiting station last July, recently received notice from the Navy department of his promotion to chief signalman's mate. This promotion makes him an officer of "the line" or chief petty officer. The importance of the post can be realized when one considers that these officers have charge of operations on the top deck which includes navigation, gunnery and those maneuvers which coincide with the fleet's movement. Carroll is a veteran of twenty-one years navy duty.

Local Navy Recruiter Is Promoted To Rank of Chief Signalman's Mate

George Carroll Receives Commission after Twenty-One Years Service

After twenty-one years in the United States Navy, George Carroll, signalman first class, has received the promotion he worked for all those years.

Carroll who is on recruiting duty at the local navy station in the post office building, received word recently that he has been commissioned chief signalman's mate.

Upon learning of his promotion, Carroll went to a local tailor and was measured for his new uniform which was made by a Baltimore firm which specializes in outfitting navy officers.

The new uniform is of the traditional navy blue with gold buttons on the right sleeve, carries the insignia of the signalman's branch and crossed flags. Four gold service stripes are on the left sleeve. An officer's visor cap emblazoned with his rank completes the uniform.

Joined Navy in 1920
Carroll enlisted in the navy at New Haven, Conn. his home town on November 24, 1920, and took his preliminary training at the Norfolk, Va., Naval Training School. A six weeks course at the Signalman's School followed.

His first duty at sea was upon the old battleship Connecticut which sailed for Europe with midshipmen of the Naval Academy, on a training cruise. Carroll was assigned to the U.S.S. Oklahoma for a period of three months and then was transferred to the U.S.S. Arizona on which ship he served six and a half years.

Served with Asiatic Fleet
He visited Lima, Peru, in 1921 aboard the Arizona which was on a courtesy tour of that country during the celebration of its one hundredth anniversary. The Arizona was assigned to duty with the Pacific fleet in August 1921.

Carroll served three years with the United States Asiatic fleet on the U.S.S. Bulmer and he talks with much interest of this period of navy life.

He returned to this country in 1930 and served on the U.S.S. Tennessee for a year. Two years as a navy recruiter in Buffalo, N. Y., followed. Other ships upon which

Senator Kimble Says He Is Not Blocking Bills

Declares Allegany Measures Passed or Received Favorable Report

In a statement issued to the Cumberland News yesterday, State Senator Robert B. Kimble emphatically denied what he termed reports that he is holding up in the Senate legislation pertaining to Allegany county, due to Mayor Irvine and the city council opposing the Police Salaries bill.

Kimble said each bill received by him from the House dealing with Allegany county has either been acted upon by the Senate or has received favorable report from the Select committee of the Senate, of which he is chairman.

Reviews Pending Bills

The senator declared he is not holding up any Allegany county legislation, saying that the $150,000 bond issue bill for the new airport at Wiley Ford, W. Va., has received a favorable report in the Senate as has the $200,000 bond issue for Frederick street sewers in Cumberland.

Kimble asserted that the bill authorizing the Allegany county commissioners to borrow $300,000 for the erection of a junior-senior high school at Mt. Savage, which was passed by the House, was amended by him at the request of Delegate Lester B. Reed, who introduced the original measure in the House.

The amended bill increases the bond issue from $300,000 to $800,000 and now provides for erection of a Junior-senior high school building at Mt. Savage, a junior-senior high school building at Lonaconing and an elementary school building at Eilersville.

Predicts Prompt Passage

The senator predicts passage of the amended school bill by the Senate this afternoon or tonight.

Senator Kimble also said he felt certain the airport bill and the Frederick street sewer measure would pass the Senate late today or Saturday.

Questioned about the bill introduced in the House providing a $500,000 bond issue for construction of an auxiliary water line from Lake Gordon to Cumberland, Kimble said the bill has not been received by him from the House and that he can take no action on it until the House acts on the bill.

Kimble told the News yesterday that the Police Salaries bill as passed by the Senate Thursday calls for only one third as much increase as the police asked in the original bill. "I reduced the bill two-thirds, saving the city that much money," Kimble added, "and I certainly feel the police are entitled to the increases as provided in the bill which passed the Senate today."

Cumberland Library Receives Interesting Books on Cookery

Many Volumes on House-keeping Now Available, Miss Walsh Says

Among the books now on hand, according to Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian, are a number with outstanding titles.

First of all there is the latest edition of "The Boston Cooking School Cook Book," by Fanny Merritt Farmer. For over forty years it has been one of America's cook books.
